Group Traces Funds Paid To Bishop Cannon

Senator Says Churchman
Placed Contributions in His Own Account
OBJECT TO QUESTIONING
Find $10,000 Was Given to Fund by Republican
Senator

Washington (AP)—The senate campaign funds committee was told today by its investigator, Basil Manly, that just $22,544 of $68,717 held by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in one of eight "political funds" in the 1928 campaign was given by the southern Methodist leader to the Anti-Smith Democrats which he headed.

Manly said that from this one fund, maintained in the Continental Trust Company of Washington, Bishop Cannon withdrew $28,278 and put $17,450 of it in his "personal account" in the American National Bank of Richmond.

He added that $17,895 of the Continental fund opened by Bishop Cannon on Oct. 11, 1928, was unaccounted for.

The committee was told by Manly that Bishop Cannon opened six new bank accounts during the period of the 1928 campaign.

Before Manly took the stand, F. C. Ferguson, president of the Hudson County National Bank of Jersey City, testified that Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, former Republican senator from New Jersey, gave $10,000 to Bishop Cannon in 1928.

Manly said neither Frelinghuysen nor the Anti-Smith committee headed by Bishop Cannon had reported the contribution to congress as required by law.

Turning to the account of "James Cannon, Jr., Chairman," opened in the Continental Trust company, Manly said it showed among the deposits hundreds of dollars in "small checks" including one of $1,000 from S. S. Kresge.

Chairman Nye asked Basil Manly committee expert, if the official report to congress by the Anti-Smith committee of Virginia showed any report of the "contribution of $10,000 which it was indicated here that Senator Frelinghuysen gave to Bishop Cannon."

"There is no report of that contribution," Manly replied.

"Is there any report by Mr. Frelinghuysen of that contribution?" asked Senator Dill, Democrat, Wisconsin.

"The report of the senate committee showing all contributions of $5,000 or more in the 1928 campaign," said Manly, "did not show the Frelinghuysen contribution."

Chairman Nye then called upon Manly to explain some prepared charts which Nye said would show the manner in which the Cannon campaign funds traveled from bank to bank.

Try to Trace Funds
The resolution under which the committee is working directs it to find out if any campaign moneys were diverted to other channels by those receiving them.

Manly pointed out on one chart eight accounts in five banks on which he said Bishop Cannon had authority to draw checks. He added there were indications of another account or two which they had not yet been able to locate.

Manly said "political funds" were found in all eight accounts and that was the only reason we examined into them.

The committee had difficulty keeping up with the manifold transfers of funds from one account to another.

AUSTRIAN "WALKS"
ACROSS ENGLISH
CHANNEL ON "SKIS"

Dover (AP)—Karl Naumestnik, an Austrian, walked across the English channel from Cap Griz Nez, France, today on a pair of water skis.

Conveyed by a fishing boat, he scudded across one of the nastiest bits of water in the world, coming ashore at Shakespeare beach here at 4:30 p. m.

He had a bad time of it all the way across the channel and a part of his foot on the way because he was afraid of seasickness.

He staggered ashore greatly weakened by his ordeal and the first thing he asked for was a glass of water.

The skis look like a couple of small canoes and they can be operated either from a sitting posture or erect. Naumestnik sat down most of the way across.

It was the first time the channel has been crossed in this fashion.

Hold Woman
In Death Of
10th Roomer

Detroit (AP)—A chemical analysis today was expected to show whether the tenth man to die in Mrs. Veras' rooming house in eight years fell to his death accidentally or was drugged and thrown from an upstairs window as police say, neighbors insist was the case.

Assistant Prosecutor George M. Stutz said he would recommend immediate issuance of a murder warrant if traces of poison also found in the viscera of Steve Mak, upon whose life, investigators said, Mrs. Veras held insurance policies totaling approximately $4,000.

The woman and her 18-year-old son, William, are held for investigation. A writ of habeas corpus for their release is returnable today.

Mrs. Veras was questioned at length last night after police discovered a ledger which, they said, indicated she holds policies on the lives of 15 men. Police also reported discovery of a knife corroded with stains. An analysis today will determine whether those stains were caused by blood.

Should results of today's investigation justify expansion of the inquiry, officers said the bodies of Mrs. Veras' three husbands and six other roomers who preceded Mak in death would be exhumed. Investigators said Mrs. Veras collected insurance estimated by them to total $20,000 at their deaths. They added, however, that it is not uncommon for rooming house keepers in the Hungarian section to carry insurance on their tenants, to cover possible arrears and to meet burial expenses. Mrs. Veras paid for the burials of the nine men.

Mrs. Veras insists Mak fell from a ladder while fixing an attic window. Investigators said neighbors who claimed to have witnessed Mak's fall told them he appeared to have been thrown from the window and to have been unconscious at the time. That was Monday. He died Tuesday morning. A post mortem examination last night revealed a cerebral hemorrhage as the cause of death. No skull fracture was shown.

A cerebral hemorrhage following an injury is recorded as the cause of death of one of the nine other roomers. Another died by hanging, records showed; two others died of carbon monoxide poisoning in the Veras garage; three from acute alcoholism; one from an intestinal complaint and one from a cause not stated.

DIES OF WOUNDS

KIDNAP VICTIM
RETURNS HOME;
NO RANSOM PAID

Police Seek Capone for Questioning in Regard to Case

Chicago (AP)—John J. ("Jack") Lynch, the wealthy gambler and turfman who disappeared last Thursday, returned to his summer home at Lake Geneva, Wis., today with a story of one week spent in the hands of kidnapers, men who Lynch said treated him well but "certainly knew their business."

Unshaved, dirty and wearing rumpled clothing, Lynch was nevertheless in good spirits when he drove his own car into his spacious estate and rushed to the arms of his distraught wife.

He had been released last night near Kankakee, Ill., Lynch said. If any ransom had been paid, he said he knew nothing about it. Published reports were that the kidnapers, who originally demanded $250,000 "or a dead Lynch," had finally released him when his friends furnished $50,000.

Al Capone, the gang leader, was supposed to have been asked to help bring about Lynch's release and last night, on reports that he was acting as a go-between, the state's attorney's office ordered his arrest. He was not found.

Lynch, former stockholder of the Arlington Park-Race track and part owner of the General News Bureau, distributor of racing information, talked freely of his capture and his release but refused to say much about ransom. The Capone angle he dismissed with the question: "Well, what about him?"

"I was driving along not far from here Thursday when they grabbed me," Lynch said. "There were seven men with sawed-off shotguns. They hustled me into an automobile and three or four more cars trailed us."

"They threw a gunnysack over my head and ordered me to keep quiet. Some fellow stopped and asked what it was all about and they told him to be on his way."

"I was driven along for what I estimate to be 30 minutes. Then they pulled up to a cottage and ordered me out. I was held there for a while—I suppose until after dark. Then they put me in a car again and drove for what I think was five or six hours. I was taken into another house."

"I got my meals regularly and the bed I had wasn't bad. They kept me blindfolded most of the time or wearing dark glasses. About noon yesterday, though, they quit feeding me and I was plenty hungry when I got home."

"I don't know anything about a ransom. I got no threats. I said to the fellows, 'Why take me?'"

"They said, 'Your friends like you pretty well. We think they'll lay it on the line.'"

"And I said, 'You got the wrong fellow.'"

"They laughed and said, 'Don't worry. We read the papers.'"

Asked if he thought the kidnapers might have been members of the "Forty-two" gang of Young Toney in the west side, Lynch replied, "This was no 'Forty-two' mob. These fellows were older and knew their business."

"I am not going to make any complaint to any one. I'm going to sleep some more today, then get up and play a little golf."

Scores Face Police In
Daily New York Roundup
As City Fights Gangsters

BY RAYMOND CROWLEY
New York (AP)—The police lineup—New York's daily parade of cut-throats, swindlers, burglars, mayhem artists and just plain suspects—has been speeded up to a quick-time shuffle.

Now that the citizenry's blood is up and the metropolis has grown to care about the gore staining its streets, roundup days are here again. The dismal procession is longer and perforce moves more quickly.

Faster and ever faster the prisoners sidestep across the platform at headquarters, mumbling their stories briefly and are hurried off

After Series
Of Dry Raids

Milwaukee (AP)—Eighteen persons were held in the Milwaukee police raid today for arraignment on charges of violating the prohibition laws as a result of 10 simultaneous raids staged last night in Kenosha and Racine, Wis.

The raiding party, including 45 agents from Chicago and Milwaukee, was directed by Lane Maloney of the Milwaukee force.

Virtually every place on "road-house row" dotting 10 miles of highway 83 in southern Kenosha, was visited. Agents served search warrants based on previous purchases made by undercover operatives.

The raids were executed quietly and prisoners were brought here quickly in automobiles.

The Kilbourn Gardens, Highways 41 and 20, was the only place visited in Racine, Wis. Agents found beer and whisky and arrested William Lenconi.

At the Fairway Grill, near Lake Geneva, the agents arrested as proprietor, Richard A. Moran, whom they identified as a brother of "Bugs" Moran, Chicago gangster, and Ray Rowling, bartender. A small quantity of whisky was seized.

Other places visited, those arrested, and evidence confiscated were: Pasadena Gardens, Bruno Rojewski, proprietor, Victor Brandt, bartender, beer and whisky; Old Farm Inn, John Kelly and Frank Karban, proprietors, beer and whisky; Te Old Tavern, William G. Jarpen, proprietor, Charles Stearns, bartender, Dew Drop Inn, Rudolph and Herman De Groot, beer and whisky; Liberty Inn, Carl E. Charleston, proprietor, Ed Sparbaro, bartender, beer and whisky; Stel Inn, Frank Frost, proprietor, large quantities of beer; Maple Inn, Arthur Schiava, proprietor, Charles Bugdor, bartender, ale and beer and whisky; Bank's Place, Maurice Lux, proprietor, Tom Riley, bartender, beer and whisky.

NEW COALITION
CABINET BRINGS
WORK ON BUDGET

Secretary of State Stimson
Visits With Ramsay
MacDonald

BULLETIN
London (AP)—Organized labor in Great Britain definitely repudiated Ramsay MacDonald's new national government today in a joint manifesto by the Trades Union congress and the Parliamentary Labor party charging that "private banking interests" had precipitated England's crisis and change of government.

"It is determined to attack the standard of living of the workers to meet the situation caused by policies pursued by private banking interests in control of which the public has no part," the manifesto read.

"It seeks to enforce a complete change of national policy, not because the nation's resources have suddenly diminished but because the nation can not afford to provide for its unemployed. Not because the budget can not be balanced, but primarily because financial interests have decided that this country is setting a bad example to other countries in taxing the rich to provide for the poor."

London (AP)—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson had breakfast this morning with Prime Minister MacDonald since the Labor government fell and the national non-partisan government was installed.

It was in the nature of an informal call and no statement concerning it was issued but it was widely commented that a meeting of this kind could not have taken place without discussion of relations between Great Britain and the United States.

The cabinet has got down to business with meetings of two committees appointed by the prime minister yesterday. One is outlining economy legislation and the other is considering the general state of parliamentary work before the special session begins on Sept. 8.

Mr. MacDonald, worn out by three weeks of unremitting labor, is going back to Loughborough tonight for a rest, but will return to his office here on Sunday to prepare for Monday's full cabinet meeting.

Labour units are continuing their organization of opposition to the new ministry.

The prime minister and his ministry today bent to the task of salvaging the British pocketbook with the knowledge that the United States was watching.

SEE TAMMANY SEEKING
PEACE WITH ROOSEVELT

Albany, N. Y. (AP)—Tammany Hall, faced with defection in its own ranks in the legislative battle over the New York city investigation, was hoping today for peace with Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and with some foundation for hope.

Well-informed Democratic circles believe the governor will give Tammany the opportunity to heal the "break" between them, possibly as early as Monday, by sending a message to the special legislative session which will give Tammany the chance to ask extension of the New York city investigation to upstate.

Insurgency in its own ranks last night was believed to have added to Tammany's desire for peace.

Brooklyn senator, William Lathrop Love, bolted the caucus of the upper house Democrats when the majority voted to oppose the immunity bills. Later the assembly Democrats adjourned a four-hour meeting without having reached an agreement. It was understood there were four, possibly six, who opposed the plan to fight the bills.

Many Pests Threaten Crops In Middle West

Chicago (AP)—Between corn earworms, hog cholera, grasshoppers, and drought, central western farmers had their troubles today.

While there was danger of peaches rotting on the trees in southern Illinois orchards because the record crop could not be picked, corn earworms nibbled away at more than half the ears in Iowa. In South Dakota rye was being sown in hope of taking fall feed from fields where other crops were damaged by grasshoppers. Insects damaged Wisconsin crops.

"Borax" Smith Dead

Above is Francis M. "Borax" Smith, wealthy capitalist and early California miner, who died today in his home in the west from injuries resulting from a fall several days ago.

Injuries In Fall Fatal
To Financier

Oakland, Calif. (AP)—Francis M. (Borax) Smith, 44, one of California's early-day gold and silver miners, died today. He suffered a broken hip in a fall downstairs at his home there three days ago.

Picturesque western plainsman and financier, Mr. Smith, known to the country over as "Borax" Smith, plied up a fortune estimated at $20,000,000 through his borax mining operations, only to lose it and find himself heavily in debt at the age of 65. A transportation company took Smith's fortune, but not his nerve, and eight years later he was a millionaire again.

Controlled Output
Smith at one time had control of the world's borax output. His first stake was made in Nevada, where he owned a few acres of timber land.

From his cabin on the mountain side he had often noticed a peculiar white streak on the desert floor below him. Investigation proved it was the largest borax deposit discovered up to that time.

Borax was then selling at $5 a pound. Smith formed a company to work the deposits, but his partners quit him when news of the discovery reached outside markets and borax dropped to less than 10 cents a pound. He determined to create a world-wide demand for his product.

Smith obtained control of even larger deposits in California, and was forced to use huge wagons drawn by 20 or more mules to get his white powder to the railroad. This was the origin of his famous "Twenty-Mule-Team" trademark.

Lose Fortune
When past the age of 50 he began to seek other fields for his great fortune. He established a transportation system between San Francisco and the rapidly growing cities across the bay, with which all went well until a rival system began to improve its service. Both companies lost money, and Smith's borax holdings were sold to meet his debts. This procedure, however, was several million dollars short.

Marquette, Mich. (AP)—The acting prison physician was slain and a guard and a trustee were wounded in an attempted break at the state branch prison here today by four convicts, who then committed suicide when their plot was foiled.

The convicts were Tony Germano, Toledo, Ohio, sentenced to 35 to 50 years for killing a Birmingham, Mich., patrolman; Leo D. Dyer, Charles Rosbury, and Frank Hofer. Germano and Hofer were at one time charged with alliance with the Laman-Andrews kidnapping gang of Detroit.

Fear General Riot
Warden James P. Corgan said that a general riot at first was feared, but that his guards were able to maintain control of the situation.

All of the guards obtained by the prisoners were in his custody, he said, and the prison was quiet.

Prison guards forced the trio into the industrial building after they had entered the prison hospital shot and killed Dr. A. W. Hornbogen, acting prison physician and wounded three others.

The three barricaded themselves in the building and guards tossed in gas bombs. When the gas cleared away the guards found three men had shot themselves.

Three of the convicts ended their lives after they had barricaded themselves in the industrial building of the prison, with a score of guards surrounding them. The fourth shot himself a half hour later when he fired at a guard in another wing of the prison and missed.

The slain acting prison doctor was A. W. Hornbogen. He was sent to death in the hospital near the main gate of the prison, when three of the convicts attempted to make a break for freedom through the hospital exit.

Frank Olligschlager, a prison trustee was wounded by one of the three convicts and physicians said he had little chance to survive. He was an attendant in the prison hospital. Joe Cowling, assistant deputy warden received a flesh wound during the gunfire in the hospital.

According to the story told by prison guards, Germano, Rosbury and Dyer entered the prison hospital for treatment about 3 a. m. in the manner in which the shooting started was not explained but Dr. Hornbogen, a former president of the Michigan State Medical Society who was acting as prison doctor in the absence of Dr. L. L. Youngquist, was shot and killed at the first outburst.

The trustee, Olligschlager, attempted to prevent the escape and was shot in the abdomen and the guard, Cowling was wounded.

Guards then forced the trio into the industrial building nearby. Tear gas was thrown into the barricade which they erected, and when the gas cleared away the men were found to have committed suicide with the guns they used in their attempted escape.

After quiet had been restored in the hospital section Frank Hofer, a prisoner in the "E" wing of the institution fired at a guard and missed. Hofer then shot and killed himself. Guards said they had not established the connection between Hofer's act and the outbreak in the hospital but they believed Hofer had planned to make his escape from the "E" wing along with the three other convicts.

Serve Life Terms
Rosbury and Dyer, sentenced from Detroit, were serving life terms. Germano, from Toledo, Ohio, and Hofer, from Detroit, were serving sentences of 30 to 50 years.

Olligschlager, the trustee, had been an attendant in the prison hospital for 15 years. Prison physicians said they did not expect him to live more than a few hours.

Warden Corgan started an investigation of the outbreak and said he would have a statement later in the day. He said the prison was quiet and no further rioting was expected.

The prison hospital is situated on the second floor of the main building. Guards said that if the men could have obtained keys from the

LISBON QUIET AFTER CLASH IN WHICH 20 DIED

Claim Hundreds Being Held in Prison on Charges of Complicity

Lisbon, Portugal — (AP) — Forty persons were reported killed and 200 wounded today when artillery troops bombarded a group of rebels who had sought refuge around the village of Caniza yesterday's sudden, short-lived revolt against the administration of President Oscar Carmona.

The revolutionary movement appears to have been in progress in the central district of Lisbon last week of Colonel Schlappe de Azevedo who as minister of war refused to sign deportation orders, against certain army officers charged with participation in the revolt at Madeira last May.

Among Prisoners — The colonel is said to be among the 200 prisoners taken by the government. Reflecting the revolutionary outbreak that cost the lives of a score of persons and left upward of 120 wounded, Lisbon was quiet today under the watchful eyes of troops.

Tanks and armored cars rumbled through the streets, providing an armed threat against further disorder, and soldiers in field uniforms paced the streets. More than 800 persons, including former members of parliament and ex-army officers, were in jail charged with complicity.

President Oscar Carmona issued a communique detailing the uprising and declaring that "once more the incorrigible mischief makers have caused anxiety to the population of Lisbon without having in any way succeeded in leading the land and sea forces to swerve from the path of duty and honor."

The trouble began early yesterday when a force of civilians and military men stormed the barracks of the third artillery regiment, imprisoning some officers and inducing others to join them. They seized artillery and ammunition enough to stage an attack.

Fall in Attempt — Falling in an assault on Saint George fortress, the insurgents have barricaded themselves in a high part of the city and dug in for battle. Bombarded by airplanes, machine guns and armored cars, they fought all day and ran up the white flag late in the afternoon after their ammunition had been exhausted.

At the same time a number of officers at the Alameda airfield joined the revolt and took to the air in four planes. They dropped several bombs and killed two women, but did no material damage. The government reported that the pilots later came down at Alentejo and were made prisoners.

Disputes from Madrid said, however, that two Portuguese planes, carrying rebels, landed at Huelva, and a third was reported to have come down at Seville. The minister of interior ordered the heads of the airports to detain the fliers until the reasons for their landing had been verified.

REPORT CHARGES OF MURDER TO BE DROPPED

Los Angeles — (AP) — Local newspaper, quoting what they termed as "authentic sources," said today murder charges against David H. Clark, former deputy district attorney and confessed killer of two political figures, are to be dropped by the district attorney's office.

Clark was tried for murder in connection with the slaying of one of the men, Herbert F. Spencer, editor of a political magazine, who was shot down last May 20 with Charles H. Crawford, wealthy former political boss. The trial just was dismissed last Sunday after it became deadlocked at 11 to 1 for acquittal.

Clark confessed killing both Spencer and Crawford in the latter's real estate office in Hollywood. He said he shot both in self defense after Crawford had reached for a pistol as the climax of an argument in which Clark had refused to "frame" Chief of Police Roy E. Steckel.

MAKE EFFORT TO ESTIMATE FUNDS NEEDED FOR AID

Gifford Attempts to Determine Amount Necessary to Prevent Want

Washington — (AP) — An estimate of the total funds to be needed to prevent acute distress among unemployed next winter was being sought today by Walter S. Gifford, national relief director, and his staff.

Among the evidence being gathered were statistics from the children's bureau of the labor department indicating distress will be materially greater during the approaching winter than last.

The children's bureau figures also indicated a larger portion of the burden probably will be borne by money derived from taxation than from voluntary contributions to charitable organizations.

Gifford has not yet ventured a guess on the amount necessary to meet needs of the jobless and their families during the coming winter, but has devoted his time to making arrangements for the national drive for funds and to organizing a force to carry it out.

Miss Katherine Lenroot, acting chief of the children's bureau, has been cooperating with the relief director in making his plans and has turned over to him data on conditions.

Her statistics indicated the expenditure of relief funds decreased materially with the arrival of warm weather last spring, but were still much higher than for the same period the year before.

Experienced relief workers have advised Gifford the distress next winter is likely to be much more widespread in proportion to the number out of work than last year, because of the exhaustion of reserve funds.

Miss Lenroot's figures also indicated that the proportion of tax money to the total relief funds last year were higher than the year before, pointing to a possible increase during the coming months.

A survey of 72 cities showed that in 1930 about 72 per cent of relief funds came from money raised by taxation while in 1929 the percentage was only 60 per cent.

Figures of the children's bureau also showed that in 100 cities of

ALLEGED OPERATOR OF BREWERY OUT ON BONDS

Milwaukee — (AP) — William Buck, charged with operating a brewery in Kenosha-co one mile east of Powers lake, was at liberty today on $1,000 bond pending a hearing Sept. 2.

Agents told Commissioner Floyd Jenkins they found 3,000 gallons of fermenting beer and complete brewery equipment at Buck's soft drink parlor.

FARM BOARD HEAD GOES ON VACATION

Chairman Stone to Spend Two Weeks in Michigan Resort

Washington — (AP) — The troubles of farmers were thrust aside by Chairman Stone of the farm board as he left last night for a rest at a Michigan resort where he hopes to forget about wheat, cotton, and Brazilian coffee for a fortnight.

The chairman was noticeably in need of rest as he stepped from his office. His work days recently have ended late at night and he was compelled to work on Sundays to clear his desk.

His departure left two board members, Carl Williams and Sam H. Thompson, in town. The others are making speeches but two will return next week to form a quorum.

The proposed sale of 15,000,000 bushels of wheat to China and a plan for stabilizing cotton prices are pending. Stone said he had not received direct word that the Chinese government seeks more favorable terms as reported from Shanghai.

As for cotton, no alternative for the board's rejected suggestion that every third row be plowed under has been forthcoming.

In commenting on the board's original plan, which was to have become effective Sept. 1, the chairman said a major purpose was to bring the south to a full realization of the seriousness of the cotton problem.

Criticism has attended the cotton destruction plan and the board's barker of wheat for coffee with Brazil, it does not seem to bother Stone.

While Stone is resting Secretary Hyde is expected to add the board in making stabilization wheat held in northwestern drought states available to farmers at low cost for livestock feed.

50,000 population and over more than $40,000,000 was spent for relief during 1930, or 89 per cent more than in 1929.

7 LIVES LOST IN NORTHWEST FOREST FIRES

Rains Have Aided Blaze Fighters in Some of Stricken Areas

Boise, Idaho — (AP) — Although the elements had come to the aid of fighters in some instances, forest and brush fires were still burning in portions of four western states today and national guardsmen remained on duty in the charred area of central Idaho.

Seven deaths were charged to northwestern fires thus far this season. Two additional units of Idaho troops were ordered out yesterday to join guardsmen and civilian volunteers fighting a blaze at Garden Valley.

Ranches and the town of Lowman were endangered by fire in the Placer-district. Grimes Pass was sandwiched between two conflagrations.

Sooters fell and unfavorable winds died down to aid fighters in halting flames which had threatened the town of Whiteside, Mont. An unidentified man died in the Deer creek fire in the Kootenai forest of that state and Anton Obermayer, 22, forest service observer, was killed

SEEK INFORMATION IN WOMAN'S DEATH

San Francisco — (AP) — Navy officials today faced a request by San Francisco police for information they obtained at a special inquiry into the death of Mrs. Daisy Price, wife of Lieut. Comm. George D. Price, who plunged to her death from a hotel window here early Sunday.

Captain Charles W. Dulles of the police inspector's bureau, announced he would ask the navy to furnish him all details presented before the board of inquiry on the airplane carrier Lexington yesterday.

Navy officials held the inquiry behind closed doors, and questioned several witnesses separately, with the announced intention of determining what court martial proceedings should result. They said the findings would be sent to Washington.

A coroner's jury previously had returned an open verdict, saying Mrs. Price came to her death "in a manner unknown."

by a falling tree in the Yaak river region.

In Wyoming a 40-mile an hour wind whipped a huge timber and grass fire out of control at Newcastle. Authorities said they would ask a help of the national guard unless rain came to aid the fighters.

Several fires were burning in California, but authorities expressed the belief that the situation was well in hand. A Lake-co fire, burning over 20 square miles of grass, brush and timber, destroyed a quicksilver mining plant and many summer homes.

WILL WED DESPITE DEPORTATION CASE

Santa Ana, Cal. — (AP) — Janina Smolinska, former Polish Bergere dancer and representative of Poland at the 1928 international beauty contest at Galveston, Tex., plans to wed next week despite deportation proceedings against her at Washington, D. C.

She and Walter Grabowski, Polish-American business man of Los Angeles, obtained a marriage license here yesterday and said the ceremony would be performed either Monday or Tuesday.

At a recent hearing Miss Smolinska pleaded with immigration authorities not to press charges of overstaying the last extension of her six months' visitor's permit. She asked that she be allowed to return to Poland voluntarily so she might re-enter the United States in the preferred quota as the wife of an American citizen. If she is deported she can never legally come back.

Her appeal has not yet been decided at Washington.

Grabowski, chairman of the Los Angeles Polish Olympic committee, said they would reside at Glendale until the case is decided.

Miss Smolinska has been working in motion pictures at Hollywood.

EARLY FREEDOM IS HELD UNWISE FOR PHILIPPINES

Vicente Villamin, Filipino Attorney, for Economic Preparation

Vicente Villamin, Filipino attorney and writer, who visited in Appleton this week, holds ideas on Philippine independence that are different from those who are agitating for separation from America.

"Politics has been overworked and economics forgotten, which is precisely the reason why the Philippine question has become more complicated and remains unsolved," he said.

"Let me say at the beginning, that the Filipinos have the natural right to direct their own destiny and they are capable of governing themselves now in their own fashion. What I want to make clear is, since love of country and common sense are not incompatible, the Philippines are economically unprepared to lose American protection and therefore should not separate immediately from America."

Need Tariff Protection
Explaining what independence means in economic terms, the Filipino visitor said that "it will automatically deprive our industries of the American tariff protection, destroying them and plunging people into poverty and penury, chaos and unrest. That is an arithmetic, not a political fact, and an amount of eloquent oratory and heroics can minimize the seriousness of that."

"Now, interpreting economics in terms of social welfare, we do not spend a dollar now for military armaments, for we do not have the right to declare war and America gives the protection free. That welcome relief enables our government to devote one-third of its revenue to public education. But despite that liberal assignment we can educate less than half of the children of school age on account of insufficient funds. Independence, which will impoverish the people and increase government expenditures in other directions, will accentuate that condition sharply."

The Filipino lawyer, asked about the Moro problem, which may develop into a serious problem of minority, said that "education is the solution, and that if the present program of education is pursued with more intensity, more funds and more sympathy in 25 years the problem will be cohesion and solidarity in the Philippine population. In America, which guarantees law and order in Morokand, we can speed this program and insure its success."

"We are building up a nation in this modern age in which economics plays a leading part. The cry of 'give me liberty or give me death' although outmoded is still employed. It is all right. It is stirring. It is inspiring. But the overwhelming cry now is 'give me work or give me death.'"

Would Remember Farmer
Independence has become muddled he said, by the insistence of the American farmer that it should be given immediately and unqualifiedly to keep Philippine sugar and coconut oil out of the United States. He said that there is a more effective, fairer and more practicable remedy.

He discussed that remedy as consisting of a plan which calls for preventing the acreage expansion of the tariff-protected industries in the islands, especially the sugar and coconut oil, and developing the unprotected and neglected products in the islands such as guano, pineapple, sugar, coffee, rubber and other materials not grown in America.

He said that over 70 per cent of the lands in the islands is controlled by the government, and the policy of expansion or non-expansion can be carried into effect with relative ease. He also said that the Filipinos should develop their resources themselves, using outside capital and technical aid if necessary.

"The program outlined will, on one hand, meet the complaint of American farmers against potential competition within the tariff wall and, on the other, develop the islands and create a new self-sustaining, self-supporting economic structure that can stand by itself without being supported by the American tariff. Thus we shall be enabled to separate from America painlessly and robustly. We can only separate now painfully and fatally."

The Filipino lawyer stressed that what is needed is "a moratorium on the tariff."

Seven Children Taken To Home For Feeble Minded

Seven children, all from the same family, whose ages were 2, 3, 5, 8, 10, 12 and 17 years sat on the steps of the county jail the other morning each with a coat or a jacket in his or her hand, and with surprise and wonderment, or sullen scowls on his face.

They were waiting for lunch just then, but later they entered Sheriff Lappe's car and started for Chippewa Falls, where they will enter the state home for the feeble minded. Some of them later may be transferred to the home for dependent children at Sparta.

Tests to determine the mentality of the children were made during the last few days by county and state authorities.

Conditions in the family long have been known to Marie Klein, county nurse but it was only recently that she was able to secure assistance to have the children taken away. A two weeks' old baby remains with its mother.

Another member of the family, a 14-year-old girl now is a patient at a hospital in Madison.

APPOINT MISS WERNER TO OFFICE AT COLLEGE

Cecilia Werner, daughter of Judge and Mrs. E. V. Werner of this city, has been named assistant to Olin Mead, registrar of Lawrence college. She succeeds Miss Florence Oberger, who is now private secretary to Dean W. S. Taylor in connection with his Epworth Heights project.

Miss Werner, who was graduated from Lawrence this spring, also will be in charge of the bookroom and will be resident supervisor at Ormsby hall, freshman dormitory. While in college Miss Werner was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity, and Mortar Board, national senior women's honorary group, was chosen one of the attendants to the May queen, and was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, social sorority.

excessive politics and disarmament in oratory, so we can keep our heads clear and our passions under control as we attack the portentous problems of nation-building."

Explains Status
Speaking of the present status of the islands, Mr. Villamin said: "The Filipinos have civil liberty, the bill of rights being in operation in the islands; that the government is a representative one, of which nearly 99 per cent of the personnel are Filipinos; that the government income is spent locally for the Filipinos; that a dollar going to America in tax or tribute."

As to the international aspects of the question, he said that "with the Orient loaded with dynamite and the prevailing conditions so pregnant with grave possibilities, to lose American protection would expose the Philippines to the overwhelming forces of mass immigration from China, economic penetration from Japan and communistic invasion from Russia."

"American liberalism should be interested in cooperating with these who are trying to reach a solution of the Philippine question on the basis of realities, a solution that looks to the achievement of that kind of sovereign independence that will have the attributes of stability, security and durability."

He concluded, saying that it was time to change the approach to the Philippine question from that favoring or opposing independence to that of exposing the facts and predicating a fair and practicable solution on them, for otherwise during and dragging will continue to characterize the handling of the question.

STREET PAVING PROGRAM NEARS END FOR YEAR

Almost Two and One-half Miles of New Pavement to Be Laid by Fall

When the resurfacing of S. One-half street is completed, the city will have laid almost two and one-half miles of new pavement this summer. A mile and a half of this is warrentite bitulith, and the other mile is concrete.

New asphalt pavements are River-cr, 2,300 feet; N. Ida-st, 457 feet; and Anna-st, 200 feet. The section of One-half-st being resurfaced with blacktop is 2,653 feet long. The new concrete streets are South River-st, 2,300 feet, Verbrick-st, 300 feet, and Washington-st, 1,000 feet.

In addition to the new pavements, a number of streets were spiked and rolled and several were treated with calcium chloride. No streets were either graveled or oiled this year, although small sections of streets were repaired with gravel.

Streets spiked and rolled were Badger-ave, Kernan-ave, North and South Lave, Brewster, Harriman, Linwood, Lawrence, Mason, Fremont, and Calumet. Several more streets are scheduled for spiking and rolling and for a treatment of calcium chloride.

MAYOR RECEIVES NOVEL ASH TRAY FROM PAVING FIRM

An ash tray representing a paved street was received Wednesday by Mayor John Goodland, Jr., as a token from a paving company, with which the city has been doing business for a number of years. The ingredients of the sides of the ash tray are asphalt and petrified wood gathered in the petrified forests of Arizona. The wood is supposed to be from 40 to 200 million years old.

SUBCONTRACTORS INCLUDED IN NEW BUILDING MEASURE

Money Must First Be Used to Pay Labor and Material Bills

Attention of Appleton persons interested in the building trade has been called to the new law—relating to embezzlement of moneys paid on construction work. The law, which was passed by the 1931 legislature, is now effective.

The new regulation, an enlargement of the former law, extends the provisions to include sub-contractors. It is important to the building industry generally because it provides that all moneys received by a principal contractor or a sub-contractor on building work must first be used to pay labor and material bills. If not so used the offender can be punished for embezzlement upon complaint of any party otherwise entitled to a claim on that job.

Protects Owners
This will protect owners, building and loan associations and sureties on a contractor's bond.

The law makes it a punishable offense to use funds for one job for financing another job, or to divert the funds to the contractor's personal use until bills have first been paid.

The law, of course, is no more guarantee to the owner, material man or building mechanic against embezzlement than laws can guarantee against bank robberies, says James T. Drought, general counsel for the Milwaukee Construction Industry Credit Bureau, Inc., but it is felt that if the law is given sufficient publicity, it should be an effective deterrent to those whose honest business and accounting methods do not always distinctly mark the difference between personal funds and construction funds.

ADD TWO NEW NOVELS TO LIBRARY SHELVES

Two new novels, one by Warwick Deeping, are ready for circulation at the Appleton public library. The new Deeping book is "The Ten Commandments," and the other new volume is "Simpson, a Life," by Edward Sackville West.

"The Ten Commandments" tells of the strange Nicholas Bonthorn, bachelor and wounded ex-soldier, who wanted nothing in life but beauty and the time to care for it; and of the lovely Rachel Buck, who regarded life as merely a time for speed and jazz. The story is told on a plane of reverence and beauty rarely equalled even in Deeping's previous novels.

The book by West, which has been exceedingly popular in England and is just now crashing America, is a movingly beautiful story of a woman who must have children to look after but never wants any of her own. The book takes the reader into the deep places of the human mind and invests with beauty the outward soul.

Gov. LaFollette requested the creation of an executive council "to bring to the state government the council and advice of selected representatives of the economic life of the state."

"It is expected," he said, "that the council will maintain a continuous inventory of the state government and its functions and make suggestions as to how the state may operate more effectively and economically."

"In addition, the council, especially in these times, is expected to deal with the current problems that affect the economic welfare of Wisconsin."

The Ridder brothers were awarded $25,000 in damages in their suit for $100,000.

The Ridder brothers are owners of a chain of newspapers in the east and middle west, including the New York States Zeitung, the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, and the Paterson Guardian.

ing the expenditures of only $17,000 to the clerk of the house.

Seeks Sources

The senate committee pushed toward the source of most of the fund used by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., in his Virginia campaign against Alfred E. Smith in 1928 to seek further light on how the money was used.

E. C. Jameson, a New York capitalist, who donated $55,300 for use in the campaign, and Miss Ada L. Burroughs of Richmond, who has been described as secretary and treasurer of the Anti-Smith Democrats were two of the principal witnesses called.

Out of the witnesses, Frank V. Sheffield, cashier of the Bank of Creve, Virginia, said Bishop Cannon had created an account in his bank in 1928 with a $5,300 check drawn on the Continental Trust Company of Washington, in which the funds donated by Jameson were held.

Find Transfer

The account, Sheffield said, originally was in the name of the churchman as executor for the estate of Mrs. Mary C. Moore, but later was transferred into a personal account by the bishop. Another witness testified that Mrs. Moore died in 1924 and most of the affairs had been settled in 1926.

This led Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, to inquire:

"Why should an account carried as an executor be made up on a political fund? We have seen here the strange business of starting new accounts on defunct affairs."

There was no answer.

LINDY AND ANNE HAVE LEISURELY DAY IN JAPAN

Slight Earthquake Visits Tokyo While Couple Is Having Breakfast

Tokyo—(AP)—Given a day pretty much to themselves before being led into an ambitious round of functions in their honor, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh today got some rest, experienced a slight earthquake and visited Japan's two greatest shrines.

It was their second day in Tokyo and had been set aside to permit the couple to rest from the long flight from New York, which they completed yesterday.

The earthquake occurred while they were at breakfast in the home of Dr. R. B. Teusler, their residence during their stay here. A slight rattle of dishes on the table and the trembling of flowers in a vase apprised them of the shock, which did not interrupt their meal.

Visit At Shrine

Accompanied by W. Cameron Forbes, American ambassador, they visited Meiji shrine, dedicated to the emperor of that name. It was under Meiji that Japan grew into a modern nation.

Later they visited Yasukuni shrine, which is dedicated to the spirits of soldiers and sailors who have died on the battlefields.

Colonel Lindbergh then made a trip to Kasumigaura naval base, where he landed yesterday, to inspect his plane. He explained that faulty spark plugs, which became fouled with oil, were responsible for the motor trouble in the Kurile islands.

While the colonel was at Kasumigaura, Mrs. Lindbergh accompanied by Mrs. James Russell, hostess at the embassy, and Mrs. Edwin Neville, wife of the embassy counselor, went shopping. They toured the Ginza, Tokyo's principal shopping thoroughfare, visiting both the department stores and the tiny shops.

While the colonel was inspecting his plane, the military and community leaders discussed it was planning to petition Emperor Hirohito to decorate him with the Order of the Rising Sun for his "meritorious flight and promoting the friendship of Japan and America."

Official Functions

The first tea ceremonies incidental to the Lindberghs' presence here will be held tomorrow. Colonel Lindbergh and Ambassador Forbes will call on Premier Wakatsuki and various members of the cabinet. They also will pay their respects to Mayor Nagata and the Imperial Aviation association. From the latter the colonel will receive a medal at a luncheon. Later Forbes will give a tea for the couple.

The official welcoming banquet under the auspices of the communications and navy ministers will be held in the evening.

Mrs. Lindbergh, who arrived here with a wardrobe weighing only 18 pounds, will require a trunk or two to hold the dresses, souvenirs and other gifts pouring in upon her.

Three fluffy summer dresses were presented to her by Mrs. Russell. Colonel Lindbergh seemed today to have the plan, which brought him and Mrs. Lindbergh from New York to Japan completely overhauled.

The mechanical work will be done at Kasumigaura Naval base, near here, where the couple landed yesterday. The overhauling will begin after the six-day program of receptions and other functions in the honor and will be completed while the couple go sightseeing about Japan.

The colonel said there was nothing seriously wrong with the plane but that an overhauling was due after its journey of more than 7,000 miles from New York. He indicated he was eager to get the work under way as soon as possible.

PRaise QUALITY OF CHEESE AND BUTTER

Milwaukee—(AP)—The quality of cheese and butter exhibits entered for the Wisconsin State fair, Aug. 29 to Sept. 4, was praised today by Harry Klueter, Madison, superintendent of the department.

The entries, Klueter said, exceeded even the high standard of quality set last year and are good examples of why Wisconsin holds its premier position as a dairying state.

In the judging of creamery butter, Class 1, Perry I. McHenry, Viroqua, took first place with a score of 55.75 and was awarded the governor's sweetstake cup. Elwood Mitchell, Clintonville, won the cup in the American cheese department with a score of 55.91, and John Minnis, Monticello, with 58, won the cup for foreign type cheese.

Waukesha—(AP)—Mrs. Kenneth Ralph, 23, convicted of aiding in the jail break of her husband and two other men, today was under sentence of two years in the women's industrial home at Taycheedah.

Evidence that Mrs. Ralph smuggled saws to the cells of the prisoners was submitted before Judge T. W. Parkson.

Ralph is serving a term of from six to seven years in state prison for forgery, one of his companions is still at large, and the third was sentenced to the Green Bay reformatory.

ted forces of the labor movement were arrayed against them.

Unanimously agreed on the economy measures to be railroaded through parliament when it meets Sept. 8 they realized that the trades union congress, the Labor party proper and the parliamentary labor delegation would block at every turn their proposals to slash the dole by 10 per cent.

The executive boards of these groups have adopted in joint meetings resolutions withdrawing their support from the four laborite members of the emergency cabinet and the government.

The decision of the former ministers in resigning rather than yield to Mr. MacDonald's program for balancing the budget.

The resolutions declared that the new government "should be vigorously opposed in parliament and by a movement throughout the country" and recommended that the parliamentary labor party constitute itself the official parliamentary opposition.

The resigned officials were praised for "declining to render support to the new administration."

Expect Development

Salient developments are expected from the full meetings of the conservative, liberal and labor parties tomorrow. The conservatives are expected to line up solidly behind Stanley Baldwin, their leader and president of the council. The attitude of the liberals is considered more doubtful but the influence of David Lloyd George and Lord Grey is counted on to swing their support behind the cabinet.

The laborites may formally depose Mr. MacDonald from the leadership of the party and read out donations Secretary J. H. Thomas. This in spite of the fact that both ministers have explained their attitudes to their following and appealed directly for their forbearance until the issue is met.

The only vacancy in the ministry has been filled with the appointment of Lord Crewe as minister of war.

prison hospital, they would have been able to escape.

The hospital riot began shortly after 8 a. m. Warden Corgan said he had not determined how the men entered the hospital, or what methods they used in obtaining guns.

The branch prison houses the most hardened criminals in the state of Michigan.

Fred Burke, notorious bank robber and killer was committed several months ago for killing a St. Joseph, Mich., policeman when the officer attempted to question him concerning a minor traffic accident.

Last week the three torch slayers who killed and burned two young couples on a lonely county road near Ann Arbor, Mich., were placed in the institution. They are David Blackstone, a Negro; Fred Smith, a former convict, and Frank Oliver, a 19-year-old painter.

The prison has been the scene of numerous attempted breakouts. In 1911 Arthur "Gypsy Bob" Happer led an attempted delivery and in the effort killed Warden T. B. Catlin. The warden subsequently died and state authorities attributed his death to the attack.

In 1922 Eddie Weisman, notorious Detroit lifer, headed a break by 15 inmates. Two were recaptured before they got outside the prison grounds and the others were picked up one or two at a time during the following few weeks.

Weisman on being transferred from the penitentiary at Jackson in 1921, attacked a deputy warden at Bay City and escaped. The next day he shot and seriously wounded Leonard Schnell, a deputy sheriff of Oakland-co. He later was captured in Detroit.

"What is your lowest price?" Smith asked the prospectors.

"Quarter of a million."

"Sold," said Smith producing his check book, and before his astonished rivals could recover from the shock, the old man was in possession.

Three months later the mines were appraised at $24,000,000.

Smith was born Feb. 2, 1846 in Richmond, Wis., and attended the public school of that city. He was graduated from Milton college, Wisconsin, in 1863 and immediately departed from his father's farm, bound for the far west.

He was twice married and had four children. His home was in East Oakland, California, but he frequently spent part of his summers on Shelter Island, New York.

Mr. Smith was active in charitable work and one of his friends, Mary R. Smith Trust for friends girls.

REEVALUATION WON'T BE FINISHED SEPT. 8

The reevaluation of the city will not be completed by Sept. 8, when the board of review convenes in adjourned meeting, T. J. Rhein, head of the project, stated this morning.

Although all residential and business property has been assessed, inability to work in several of the larger mills will hold up the completion of the work beyond the date set for the meeting of the board of review. The field men are now checking assessments so everything will be in readiness as soon as the mills are ready for the reevaluation.

MORAL: DON'T STAND NEAR BANK WITH SHOT GUN IN POSSESSION

Sheriff John Lappen was roused out of bed at midnight last night and informed that the Greenville state bank was being robbed. Hurriedly dressing and putting guns in his car he put in calls to his two motorcycle officers and then called Greenville to instruct someone to watch which way the robbers fled.

Carlson Greenville he informed R. A. Nelson, telephone operator, of what he had heard. He learned that Nelson and several Greenville men had been at the bank a few minutes before, one with a shot gun, and that apparently a passing motorist had taken them for robbers.

The Greenville men had been called out by a report that chicken thieves were active in the village. They returned to the bank corner where one stood along the road with the shot gun and another investigated an open cellar door at the bank. A passing motorist saw them, mistook them for robbers and called Appleton.

CHICKENS, DUCKS KILLED BY DOGS IN TOWN GRAND CHUTE

Scattered over a 5-acre area, the remains of 70 chickens on the William Drexler farm on Taylor-rd and 25 ducks on the Arthur Downer farm on highway 47 were found today. The poultry was killed by dogs last night. A. W. Laabs, chairman of the town of Grand Chute, declared the farmers should be warned against these dog killers and keep their fowls locked up. That dogs were responsible was evidenced by the manner in which the feathers were pulled and scattered about the field, and by the way the fowls were bitten.

lions less than was needed, Smith was forced into bankruptcy.

Then providence came to the rescue. A silver mine which he had purchased years before and forgotten about was found to be valuable. He could have lived comfortably from this income, had he not promised to pay the millions he owed.

Scraping together all his available funds he invested in more borax land in California, built a refinery and began to compete with the powerful organization he had created. One day early in 1921 while in New York he heard that three prospectors had discovered a borax mine near the Grand Canyon and wanted to sell immediately. Although 75 years of age, he traveled five days by train then rode 80 miles across the desert on horseback, only to find representatives of his big competitors on the ground.

Beats Rivals

There was no time for an appraisal of the property, and the representatives of his rivals seemed doubtful of their authority under the circumstances.

"What is your lowest price?" Smith asked the prospectors.

"Quarter of a million."

"Sold," said Smith producing his check book, and before his astonished rivals could recover from the shock, the old man was in possession.

Three months later the mines were appraised at $24,000,000.

INDEPENDENTS WILL BE CALLED IN PROBE

Milwaukee—(AP)—Independent gasoline filling station operators will be called to tell their version of gasoline sales when the investigation by the state department of agriculture and markets is resumed in September.

The investigation seeks to determine whether the oil companies use unfair trade practices in their leasing projects.

FARMER FORCES OPPOSE BOOST IN RAIL RATES

14 States Represented at Hearing in Kansas City

Kansas City—(AP)—Agricultural interests of the midwest today assembled additional evidence for presentation at an interstate commerce commission hearing into a proposed 15 per cent increase in railroad freight rates.

The hearing opened yesterday, with most of the testimony coming from farmers, stockmen and transportation rate experts of Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Nebraska.

Fourteen states are represented in the 28 farm organizations opposing the rate increase at the four-day meeting.

Witnesses before Commissioners Joseph E. Eastman and Claude E. Porter at last night's session pictured the farmers' plight as the worst they had seen an contended that the increase would only add to the burdens under which agriculture and allied industries are suffering.

One of these was Arnold Berna, Peabody, Kas., livestock feeder, who said a 15 per cent increase in his annual freight bill of $14,000 would amount to $2,000 annually.

"In many cases," he added, "that small amount is the difference between success and failure."

The hay interests were championed by J. C. Schulte, Omaha, Neb., who stated that commodity was one which did not lend itself to extensive movement by truck and that the new rate would affect the business severely.

V. E. Smart, chief of the transportation department of the Missouri Public Service commission, introduced a mass of figures to show how the rate hike would apply to Missouri farmers.

U. S. RADIO FANS LIKE PROGRAMS, SALTZMAN SAYS

Head of Federal Commission
Makes "Experiment"
While Vacationing

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press
Washington—(CPA)—The average American citizen is satisfied with radio broadcasting today, in the opinion of Maj. Gen. Charles M. Saltzman, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission.

While vacationing for a month in upper New York state, General Saltzman said he "experimented" to get a cross-section of public sentiment on programs, and the composite opinion of the man on the street rather than of the experts who consult with and appear before the commission.

"Those I interviewed included men and women in every walk of life and they seemed overwhelmingly in favor of broadcasting and pleased with the benefits they are deriving," said the generalissimo of Washington's radio officialdom. "I was surprised by the uniformity of opinions relating to programs."

General Saltzman said he did not find complaint against excessive advertising or overcommercialism of radio programs. Advertising interspersed in sponsored programs, he said, evidently is taken for granted by the average listener, while many of those with whom he chatted commended what they viewed as the steady improvement in program quality.

Select Programs

"Of course I met individuals who had singled out particular programs or types of programs for criticism. But they were in a most decided minority and the general run of those with whom I talked were grateful for the service being rendered by broadcasting."

General Saltzman said he was most gratified to obtain this listener reaction, and while it may not be considered all-inclusive it does show that the public mind no longer is centered on the old problem of "howls and squeals" in broadcasting but is now appraising the merit of programs.

Just a few months ago, he said, there were complaints of interference with broadcasting reception from almost everywhere, but that it is apparent now that for the most part these technical difficulties have been surmounted and radio is on the road to mechanical perfection.

"The job that now remains before the federal radio commission in broadcasting, is that of improving the technical setup of stations," said Saltzman.

General Saltzman's comments are considered particularly significant in view of the movements in several different sectors to combat what is described as the "over-dose" of advertising in radio. It has been charged that there is a growing wave of resentment against excessive advertising blarney on the air, and that unless remedied, it inevitably will lead to a revolt on the part of the public.

Have Child's Eyes Tested Before He Starts School

Madison—Before children are sent to school they should have their eyes examined. Many of the pupils in the grades who are looked upon as backward and dull by their teachers, are often suffering from some trouble of the eyes. Probably no single cause contributes more to backwardness among pupils than eye defects.

The Educational Committee of the Wisconsin Medical Society, in a bulletin today declares that grownups are able to detect defects of the eyes in themselves but often are found to neglect their children in this regard.

"A person has only one set of eyes to carry him through life," declares the bulletin issued today, "and when they are worn out a new set cannot be installed."

"Grownups, as a rule, know something of the care that should be given to their eyes, but children do not, and we can not start too early to safeguard these precious possessions for them."

"Babies, for instance, should sleep in a well ventilated but carefully darkened room. If they take their daytime naps out-of-doors, some arrangement should be devised for shading their eyes from the light."

If the baby goes out in a carriage or go-cart for his daily airing, the hood should be tilted in such a way that his eyes at all times are comfortably shaded from direct sunlight. However, the exposure to light which is almost unavoidable when giving a baby a daily twenty minute sunbath does no harm.

"Equal care should be taken as the children grow older to see that their eyes are adequately protected. Children should always have as much sunshine and fresh air as possible, but a direct glare of light into the eyes should always be avoided. It is well to remember, too, in connection with any indoor arrangements that the eyes of children, like those of adults, are best protected when the light comes from the left side. "Door play quarters should always be well lighted."

"Eye strain may develop very early in life, and children should be carefully watched for any signs of it. If they scowl or squint when they look at a toy or at their picture books, if they seem dull and listless, it is a wise plan to have them examined. Cross eyes should not be neglected but should be brought promptly to the attention of an eye specialist. One year of age is not too early to begin the treatment of cross eyes. The earlier the treatment is begun the better are the permanent results that may be expected and if treatment is delayed one eye may become, for all practical purposes, permanently blind.

BADGER STATIONS HOLD FREQUENCIES

Wisconsin Broadcasters
Show Ability to Measure
Up to U. S. Standards

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)

Washington—Four Wisconsin radio stations were among the 84 throughout the country that during July demonstrated their ability to measure up to the new high standard of accuracy in maintaining their assigned frequencies, which the Federal Radio commission hopes eventually to enforce.

Present regulations allow stations to stray as much as 500 cycles away from their allotted wavelength but the commission is seeking to coax all stations to within 50 cycles of their assigned frequency, so as to minimize interference and improve radio reception.

Stations WILAD and WTMJ and WISN at Milwaukee and WESB at Superior succeeded in making this high record for the month. It is likely that other Wisconsin stations reached this goal but were not included in the report which comprises only 294 out of the 613 stations in the country. The omission of some stations from the report was principally due to the fact that their power output is insufficient to reach the frequency measurement stations.

Station WIBA at Madison stayed within 100 cycles of its assigned frequency.

On the basis of the records of reporting stations, steady progress has been noted during recent months in the accuracy with which stations maintained their assigned frequency. In March only 19.3 per cent of the reported stations stayed within 50 cycles of their allotted frequency, while in July 32 per cent accomplished this feat.

MINES, QUARRIES USE 81,035 TONS OF FUEL

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)

Washington—Wisconsin mines and quarries used 81,035 tons of soft coal, 149 tons of anthracite coal, and 47,163 tons of coke in operating during 1928, the census bureau announced today.

Additional fuel was supplied by 150,525 gallons of fuel oil, including crude oil and gas oil and by 415,287 gallons of gasoline and kerosene.

Manufactured gas supplied the energy in some Wisconsin mining and quarrying enterprises, using a total of 2,227,000 cubic feet of gas during the year while 40,977,000 kilowatt hours of electric energy were purchased by mines and quarries in the state and 53,900 kilowatt hours of electric energy were generated by the mines and quarries themselves for use in operation.

Equipment purchased during the year by Wisconsin mines and quarries amounted to $655,000.

Resinol heals him quickly

"When my baby was a few weeks old eczema broke out on his body. I tried various treatments but none of them seemed to give him any relief. He only grew worse and cried all the time. ## J. AUSTIN HAWES

With the death of J. Austin Hawes, Appleton has lost a citizen who played a prominent part in city affairs for a number of years.

Mr. Hawes was mayor of Appleton for two terms, from 1918 to 1921. When he assumed the mayoralty for the first time, he took over his duties at a restless period in the city's political history. After a rather brief experiment with the commission form of government, the voters had readopted the aldermanic system, and Mr. Hawes became the first mayor following the discard of the commission.

Probably the outstanding accomplishments during his administration were construction of the Law-st and Memorial bridges. In addition to their practical value, both structures added materially to the beauty of Appleton. The projects were carried to completion despite fiery opposition in the city council. Construction of only Memorial bridge was originally considered, but when a deadlock arose in the council, peace was established by authorizing construction of the Law-st bridge as well.

Prior to his occupancy of the mayor's chair Mr. Hawes was secretary of the old Appleton Water Works for many years. He was associated with the plant when the hydrant rental suit, which remained in litigation until this year, was instituted. He severed his connections with the plant when the company was purchased by the city in 1911.

Citizens interested enough in civic affairs to take an active part in municipal government perform valuable services. Mr. Hawes was one of those and Appleton deeply mourns his death.

A QUARTER OF A BILLION

The assurance given to the post office department by the three great international gatherers of news of their cooperation to prevent consummation of the far-flung spider like plans of commercial gamblers, was of course to be expected not merely in obedience to the proper regulations of the post office department prohibiting the use of the mails to newspapers which carry matter relating to these gambling schemes, but in the fuller realization of the wholly dishonest and repulsive operations that are always in process of formation among those who wouldn't work enough to weave a garment but spend all their time weaving webs to entrap the simple and unwary.

The exposure uncovered the endeavors of these gamblers in the employment of a press agent whose duty it became to dress a sordid affair in an attractive manner in order to delude the public and cheat it out of its pocket-book.

It is gratifying to know that these press associations state they have been moved to action through "the large number of newspapers which have editorially expressed their views against this lottery traffic," and that "their enlightenment of the general public will do much to prevent an enormous economic loss to their fellow citizens estimated to amount to not less than a quarter of a billion dollars in the last six months."

This country is looked upon as such a fertile field for schemes of this character that the authorities must not only combat American but foreign swindlers operating from almost every point of the compass.

A PRIMARY INFIRMITY

The situation in the first congressional district which has arisen over the choice of a successor to the late Congressman Cooper again points to a plain flaw in our primary law.

The regular element in the Republican party held a convention inviting delegates from each county in the district and decided upon State Senator Blanchard to represent it. But there is no means of preventing anyone else becoming a candidate and seeking the identical support, and two other regulars have already indicated a purpose to stay in the race.

The Progressive element held a similar convention and selected Thomas Amle to represent it but the widow of Congressman Cooper is reported as determined to stay in the contest.

The public is interested only in seeing that a majority controls, but it is quite evident that in a free-for-all of this character one representing a minority may likely be selected.

The situation presents an infirmity in the present primary act which should be removed, else we lose the effect of the right of a majority to control the destiny of our policies.

CUBA AND AMERICAN INTERVENTION

The present Cuban rebellion brings forcibly to mind the special relationship existing between that country and the United States.

Ever since the creation of the Cuban Republic after the Spanish-American war, this relationship has involved the legal right of intervention by the United States, thereby constituting a restriction upon the independent sovereignty of the island republic.

Under the now existing treaty, and as provided for in the Platt Amendment virtually made a part of the Cuban constitution, the United States retains the right of intervention for the preservation of Cuban independence and the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty.

The treaty also includes Cuba's pledge to promote public health, to keep the public debt within reasonable limits and to submit to no other foreign control.

The retention of the right of intervention by the United States was dictated partly by altruistic motives of protecting a republic for the creation of which it was responsible. Other motives involved the strategic position of Cuba with reference to the Panama Canal and the protection of America itself.

These motives still are a controlling force in our Cuban relations.

At the end of the first period of occupation American investors had put eighty million dollars in Cuba. Today this interest is in excess of eleven hundred million.

Thus far the United States has intervened but once, in 1906, in order to reestablish a government thrown into disorder by armed rebellion and political chicanery.

In the present rebellion there is no indication the American government contemplates intervention. It is good policy on the part of this country that such right be used as sparingly as possible.

In case of wide-spread disorder, however, there is always the possibility that the circumstances may warrant armed intervention. As long as the present arrangement exists this eventually can never be absent from our government's consideration.

Opinions Of Others

TROUBLES IN PORTO RICO

Porto Rico is a tropical island inhabited by the descendants of that long stream of Spanish conquistadors who kept coming for centuries, and also of other races brought in by slavery. Civilized life here therefore has developed amid tropical environments and Latin traditions, and conditions of life and achievement are the result of action and reaction between these mixed races and their surroundings.

In the matter of public health, we have the same problems of any other country, plus those of a tropical country, with the exception of a few diseases which for more or less known reasons are either very mild or practically non-existent. So, to such maladies as pneumonia, measles, whooping cough, diphtheria and typhoid fever of temperate climates, we must add the dangers of malaria, yellow fever, and intestinal parasites, besides some other tropical diseases, if we are to recite the whole list of our discomforts.

Nevertheless, cholera, the plague, yellow fever and small pox do not exist in this island. Smallpox was stamped out many years ago, though it is still a menace in most civilized countries of temperate zone. But we cannot say the same about tuberculosis, which is the second largest cause of death in the island, while gastroenteritis is the chief one, affecting mostly children under two years of age.

Our general death rate for the last five years has had an average of 23.1 per thousand. This includes the year 1928, when a terrific hurricane swept the island, but even if we do not include that year, our general death rate for the same period would be 23.9. This compares with an average of 22.7 per thousand for the continental United States. The infant mortality rate is terrific—155 per 1,000 under one year. In the United States it is 76 per 1,000 under one year. Tuberculosis causes 4,000 deaths a year—a ratio nearly four times that of the United States. There are at least 20,000 cases of tuberculosis at present in Porto Rico, according to Dr. A. Ferns, health commissioner of health—San Juan (Porto Rico) El Progreso.

One man, by merely pressing push buttons, strikes all the coal-burning boilers in a 47-story New York hotel. The boilers burn pulverized coal, and when a button is pushed exactly the right amount of coal to keep the fire at proper heat is automatically released from the bunkers to the fire box.

The antester has no teeth whatever, and has only a very small mouth which serves as an opening through which to protrude its long extensible tongue and draw in its insect food.

IT'S SAID that the Democrats are going to attack the Republicans on the basis of dealing with crime during the next election . . . and the Republicans can turn right around and attack the Democrats on the same basis . . . and everybody can attack everybody else and we'll have a grand old fashioned election with a lot of noise, mud and such . . . but you can be sure of one thing—as soon as prosperity is whirling it up in full swing and everyone is driving cars twice as big as they can afford, that whoever is in Congress at the time will take credit for it . . .

The population of Scotland has decreased eight per cent in the last ten years. So, Thib, they aren't as close as they used to be.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

"Throughout the years that we've been wed, With all their stormy weather, And all their fits of doubt and dread, Somehow we've kept together. Somehow, my dear, in spite of care And hurts that came to smart us, And little wrongs which seemed unfair We've never let them part us."

"Oh, we've had days of storm and stress, And we've had grief that tried us; But sorrow never made love less, Or threatened to divide us. Somehow in spite of all I've done And said when I was fretted, We've managed to keep going on Like sweethearts, newly mated."

"We've had our share of ups and downs, And tasks to irk and fret us. Our foolishness brought frequent frowns, Our blunders gave us upset us. But since the tie that binds our snaps For others just as plucky, And we've escaped disaster, praps My dear, we've just been lucky." (Copyright, 1931, Edgar A. Guest)

This Year of Grace!

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

NON-SURGICAL TREATMENT OF GOITRE

Fifteen years ago an American physician recognized as an authority on the subject asserted that three out of every four cases of exophthalmic goitre are curable by medical treatment. This was a conservative claim. He gave what were then regarded as the "indications" or factors favoring operation in exophthalmic goitre are curable by medical treatment.

1. The prompt relief of hyperthyroidism or intoxication of the system by the excessive thyroid secretion.

2. Conservation of the patient's energy, an important consideration in severe cases.

3. Saving of time. The removal of part of the overactive thyroid gland accomplishes in a few hours what would take weeks or months of non-surgical treatment.

4. The relief of dangerous pressure symptoms which develop in certain cases.

5. Evidences of malignant changes (cancer) in the gland always call for immediate surgical interference.

On the other hand are the factors which favor the non-surgical or medical treatment:

1. The possibility of post-operative myxedema (due to insufficient thyroid secretion from the portion of the gland left intact).

2. The mortality rate of thyroidectomy which is considerably higher than that of appendectomy.

3. The fact that the majority of cases do recover without surgery.

If I had a goiter I'd elect to play around with purely medical treatment for not less than six months before I would willingly submit to operation. When I have three suits in the picture I always bet the pot, and usually I win on this system. It is a fact that the majority of cases of exophthalmic goitre are well on the way to recovery within six months if the patients have good conscientious medical treatment. The main element of treatment is rest, physiologic rest, metabolic rest. Our business laymen may think he knows what this means, but he doesn't. It requires a very skilled physician to give such patients the full benefit of physiologic rest.

In the last fifteen years we have learned considerable about exophthalmic goiter and its treatment that we scarcely understood before.

The general public has learned a little about it, too. The friends and relatives of patients who have undergone operation know that the operation never cures. The operation is merely one stage in the treatment. The operation calls for great technical skill and experience on the part of the surgeon. It does not in the least dispense with the need for the constant supervision and attendance of the physician. The exophthalmic goiter patient who relies wholly upon a surgeon and dismisses or evades his regular medical adviser is surely out of luck. Never does the patient need the care of his physician more than he does when operation is done.

Here is an instance which, in my judgment, undebatably upholds my contention that family or general medical adviser and surgeon or specialist should share fifty-fifty in the fee paid by the patient.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This Lady Knows How To Breathe

Fortunately I had a good teacher in expression and voice culture. At her suggestion I began practicing what you describe as belly breathing. It improved my circulation and gave me additional pep. It seemed to me that I was breathing with my chest. Whenever I was short on running to catch a car or on climbing a hill, I think belly breathing is now a habit with me. My chest scarcely moves when I breathe. I am teaching expression now. Have a scrapbook in which I keep your important articles on this subject. Whenever pupils have doubts I call Dr. Brady to substantiate my claims. Count me among your grateful pupils. (I. A.)

Answer—Rather a colleague. I am happy to have your approval and to know that my efforts help you in your teaching.

More Bunk About Skin Absorption

P. A. Kehoe and F. Thannman conducted some experiments to discover whether tetra tili lead gasoline applied to the skin would absorb.....

these experiments showed that it would absorb.... (L. C. T.)

Answer—That is to say, Kehoe and Thannman imagined perhaps some of the poison was absorbed thru the skin. Too many of the modern "scientists" confuse their theories or fancies with the truth. There is no scientific evidence available today that anything is ever absorbed thru the unbroken skin. The idea of skin absorption is merely an old assumption which no one is able to prove by actual experiment properly controlled. This fact cannot be brushed aside by mere assertions made by doctors, chemists or other self-styled "scientific" persons, no matter how vehement. My own skin is at their disposal any time they care to demonstrate that the unbroken skin can or will absorb any poison. They dare not call my bluff, much as they would like to.

My husband wrote and got the recipe for Whitfield's ointment which you recommend for foot itch. He also had a pruritus or itchy condition elsewhere and he applied some of the ointment there just once, and the itch has never come back since.... (Mrs. S. D. M.)

Answer—I do not advise using the Whitfield salve for other skin troubles, but I am glad to know that it seemed to bring relief in pruritus elsewhere. The recipe is intended for foot itch, athlete's foot, ringworm, trichophytosis. Glad to read the recipe and directions to readers who ask for it (no clipping will suffice) and inclose stamped addressed envelope.

The Tynmites

By Hal Cochran

THE carnival parade was quite a startling thing. My what a sight. All sorts of floats were taking part and people lined the streets. Some floats were packed with girls galore, whose waving made the watchers roar. And others contained acrobats who did some startling feats.

Said Scouty, as they rode along, "This float is just where we belong. There's room for every one of us. I'll bet we get a cheer." And, sure enough, from place to place, each time a Tynny show his face, the crowd sent up a greeting. Clowny said, "I'm glad we're here."

"I feel as proud as I can be because the folks are cheering me. This being in the parade ourselves instead of watching it is quite a new idea. For we never have tried it before. I thought at first that I'd be scared, but I am not one bit!"

An hour passed by and then the parade was over. Then the Tynmites made a dash for an ice cream place, 'cause the ride had made them hot. They found what was a clever stunt, where tables were set out in front. "Bring on the ice cream," Clowny cried. "I know I'll eat a lot."

Toward night the took a big machine and rode away. Each one was keen to know where they were bound for. "Santiago is the spot," explained the kindly Traveler. "Man, we'll get there quickly as we can. That city's down in Chili, as you all know, like as not."

At last the long train ride was over and they were on their way once more to look around and see the sights. Along the way they played. And then the Traveler yelled, "Stop! Now follow me into this shop. It is a very strange place where real lovely hats are made."

A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—That slim, blue-eyed Tankee of six-foot-one—Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut—apparently has ideas of his own as to the best methods of keeping in the public's eye.

While his more orthodox colleagues issue long and brilliant statements through the publicity departments of their party organizations, express their views on this and that issue on the stump, in their local newspapers and the like, Bingham follows a different course.

He takes to the air to attract attention to the Bingham cause.

Thus, if you have been to a movie recently, you probably noticed in the news reels how the senator climbed into an autogiro at the steps of the capitol and flew to his country club for a round of golf.

Also, you have probably seen pictures of him as best man at the wedding of a prominent air official in Washington with Amelia Earhart as matron of honor. You heard him over the radio while Post and Gatty were here, skillfully, inducing the quiet. Post to describe his epoch-making flight.

Turns Pilot At 42

And so on—

The senator gets a big kick out of his activity in aviation, as well as this extremely valuable personal publicity.

He is a genuine aviation enthusiast. He was 42 years of age when he learned to pilot a plane, and he has been hopping from place to place in one ever since.

In the days of the World War he was a lieutenant-colonel and assigned to act as chief of the air personnel in Washington, but at his own request he was sent to France and eventually made commander of this country's largest aviation instruction center at Issoudun.

When the war was over he sat down and wrote a book, "An Explorer in the Air Service," the log of his experiences as a war-time flier.

By Inheritance

Bingham comes of a line of ancestry which down through the years dared the unknown.

Deacon Thomas Bingham came to Connecticut from England in 1639. The senator himself is third of that name in line. His father and grandfather attained considerable note as Congregational missionaries to South Sea Islands.

He has traveled odd places of the globe and is known as an authority on some phases of South American civilization. His parents were missionaries who left New England for the Hawaiian Islands and he was born in Honolulu.

He is one of the most striking figures in the senate. His thick hair is silver. The light gray sack suits which he wears at all times are entirely in accord with his appearance.

WILSON REPLIES TO POPE

On Aug. 27, 1917, President Wilson, through Secretary of State Robert Lansing, answered the peace proposal of Pope Benedict, indirectly addressing the German people to the effect that no peace was possible with their present "irresponsible" government.

"We cannot take the word of the present rulers of Germany as a guarantee of anything that is to endure unless explicitly supported by such conclusive evidence of the will and purpose of the German people themselves."

"We must await some new evidence of the purposes of the great peoples of the Central Powers. God grant it may be soon and in a way to restore the confidence of all peoples everywhere in the faith of nations and the possibility of a covenant of peace."

President Wilson's message was acclaimed in France, England, Italy and America, and derided in Germany.

Some good has come out of prohibition. Didn't those coast guards—trained in chasing rum runners—sink that ship after the army bombers muffed the job.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY WILLIAM GARDNER

New York—Fashions in gun toting change—not according to the dictates of the more stylish gunmen, but in accordance with the demands of expediency.

Several members of New York's carefully selected and rather secretive gun squad say that most of the potential of recorded killers they have picked up recently have had their guns on the hip.

For a long stretch it was considered the proper thing to do, to carry the pistol in a holster along under the left arm or in a pocket over the left breast.

Killers learn by the so-called "hit and miss" method, rather than by reasoning (if you'll admit the distinction).

Some years back—about the time of the beginning of the world war—criminals who were quick on the draw discovered that the "hip motion" was fatal. A hand crawling back toward the hip was sufficient to warrant a copper's shooting, without waiting to find out what the suspected one was reaching for.

At least one state still makes the hip movement a substantial defense plea in a killing case.

Also, it was found that the gun on the breast was easier to get to in hand-to-hand struggle than one on the hip.

But lately the snake-like movement of the right arm toward the left breast has become as deadly as the old hip movement used to be.

Bunko Bridge

The latest thing in filling stations in New York is a "bridge club" in the fashionable East Fifties.

It is not a gambling joint, the management insists, because there are no roulette wheels or other games "banked" by the house.

But when the members, who are all supposed to be bridge enthusiasts, drop in late in the evening and need a fourth—or even an entire couple—there always happens to be a play around whom the management will introduce. And these ladies and gentlemen are whizzes at auction or contract!

The point stakes run higher after a few rounds of refreshments are served by tuxedoed waiters—and there are so many bridge fans. Somehow, the management doesn't seem to be feeling the depression.

Oddities And Endings

Mitchell and Durant, one of the several "mad act" comic teams in high favor for their rough, and frequently painful, blows and dives, have had the same athletic trainer for 10 years.

He is a 55-year-old German, whom most persons of the theater know simply as Max. He travels with the madcaps when they are on the road, and after their strenuous performances, rubs out the charleyhoes and bruises.

Thomas Melghan, who came back to his Great Neck, Long Island, home to spend August after attempting a talkie come back on the west coast, was seen on the stage here before the end of the year.

Warner Oland, who motored from Hollywood to New York with his wife and a group of friends, visited this city's Chinatown the other night. Said he wasn't very much impressed, after what he saw in "Frisco. Couldn't even get a "cue" for his next "Charlie Chan" film.

HITS PROPOSAL TO MAKE POSTAL SERVICE PAY

Representative Kelly Says Public Is Opposed to Plan

Washington — (AP) — Postmaster General Brown's endeavor to make the postal service pay its own way was assailed today by Representative Kelly of Pennsylvania, as contrary to public desire.

Kelly, in writing the book "United States Postal Policy," just published, asserted the business of handling the mails "can no more be transformed into a money making enterprise than a brook trout can be made to live in a cage."

The author is the second ranking Republican member of the house postoffice committee, and initiator of much of the recent postal legislation.

Asserting service to the American public was the prime objective of the mails, the Pennsylvania maintained it could not be "measured on a dollar and cents basis" and predicted "there will be no change in the service-first policy" of the post-office.

"While there may not be a well-defined public opinion on every public question," he continued, "there is a consistent and continuous public opinion as to the true goal of the postal service."

"Congress comes and goes; postmaster generals have their brief hour of authority; and depart, but the American people hold steadfastly to the determination that their great agency for postal communication shall be maintained on the service and not on the money-making policy."

Quoting the postmaster general's annual report of last year recommending an increase in rates for first class postage to make the service self-sustaining, the book said the "decision is one to be made by the American people" rather than the head of the department.

"If preventing a deficit is the primary task of the postal establishment," Kelly continued, "it must be transformed into a vastly different institution than the one which has been shaped under the service policy for fourscore years."

Handful Of Potatoes Has Fed Millions Of Chinese

Washington, D. C.—The Biblical miracle of the loaves and the fishes was somewhat paralleled in real life during the recent famine in Kansu Province, China," according to a communication to the National Geographic Society from William W. Simpson, Tennessee missionary, whose son acted as guide and interpreter for Dr. Joseph F. Rock, National Geographic Society explorer.

"A handful of potatoes sent from America, 25 years ago, planted and extensively propagated by Christian missionaries in this remote part of China along the Tibet border, saved the lives of more than a million Chinese when the district was ravaged by drought and famine," Mr. Simpson says.

"When the first Americans and Europeans penetrated the Kansu Province, and established mission stations in Taichow (Old City), some forty years ago they found a small, poor, and had a very low food value. The natives of the district, with little regard for the future, had been in the habit each year of eating the best of the crop and saving the poorest potatoes for seed," the communication continues.

"A letter of appeal to the United States brought four Early Rose potatoes from Tennessee, and these were planted in 1897, two in Taichow, and two in Minchow.

They grew very well and produced many tubers of fine quality in Chinese soil. The missionaries kept all that were produced the first year for seed. The next year, however, the crop was divided with the Chinese, who were taught how to cut up the large potatoes for seed in order to keep up the quality of the crop.

Rebellion Intervenes
"In a few years the new variety spread to several counties of the province, which had a total population of some 10,000,000 people. But the Boer Rebellion resulted in a recall of all the Christians from the district and while they were away the Chinese fell back into their old habit of eating all the best, and also of allowing the new variety to become mixed with the diseased older type of potato."

"The flavor and food value of the potato plantings had so deteriorated when missionaries were again operating in Kansu that Mr. Simpson decided to send for fresh tubers from America. Friends in Massachusetts forwarded a mere handful of Green Mountain potatoes, which were planted in 1903. The experience of Chinese planters with the earlier American variety helped to speed the distribution of the Green Mountain tubers, which quickly supplanted both the native and the early rose types. In the three years' famine since 1928, one of the worst famines the world has ever known, almost half the population of Kansu, and also of the Province of Shensi, to the east, have died. But where the Green Mountain potato was cultivated the larger part of the population has been able to subsist. It has been estimated that fully a million people have been living by eating these potatoes.

Ate Tree Bark, Insects
"Where American potatoes had not been cultivated the people resorted to the bark of trees, roots of grasses and insects. As these could not long sustain life the people depending upon them became easy victims of disease and pestilence. In a few limited areas, where wheat and rice had been introduced by missionaries, these cereals proved of great assistance in famine time. In many regions where Chinese wheat had been entirely killed off by blight the newer American varieties flourished, apparently not being susceptible to the same diseases as were the Chinese varieties."

Mr. Simpson's son, William F. Simpson, also a missionary, served as guide and interpreter for Dr. Joseph F. Rock, National Geographic Society explorer, during his search for the Mountains of Mystery in 1922, when Dr. Rock's expedition penetrated the unknown Amay Machen range near the China-Tibet border.

Helped End War
Six years ago, when a religious war was in progress between Mohammedans and Tibetans of northeast Tibet, this young man, then only 24 years old, acted as intermediary between the two forces and brought an end to a bitter struggle which had been conducted with great cruelty and inhuman massacres on the part of each side. Between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 people were involved in the negotiations carried on by this young volunteer diplomat, whose only commission was a roving one from American religious organizations. Having spent 27 of his 30 years along the China-Tibet border he is perfectly adapted to the climate and knows the manners, customs and languages as well as the natives of the district. Mr. Simpson, Junior, is at present in Labrang, Tibet, the headquarters of the Living Buddha of northeastern Tibet, and the site of the largest Tibetan Buddhist temple.

HARVEY WILL LEAD "LIBERAL" PARTY

New Group Also Adopts Platform Including 5-year Moratorium on Debts

Monte Ne, Ark.—(AP)—Delegates who attended organization of W. H. (Coin) Harvey's new "liberty" party were on their way home today after naming him the party's choice for president and formulating a platform embodying a moratorium of private debts.

The convention adjourned here last night following selection of Harvey as presidential candidate, and Andrae Nardskog of Los Angeles, as his running mate. Details of concluding the convention's business were left to the new party's national executive committee.

Harvey, veteran of William Jennings Bryan's free silver campaigns was ready to begin his fight as standard bearer of the new party.

The aged crusader for a monetary system revision, who furnished Bryan and the Democratic party with platform planks in the political battles of 25 years ago, is taking the field with a radical platform the convention he called and dominated adopted.

Harvey, 89 years of age, accepted the nomination rather than see the convention adjourn without agreeing on a ticket.

The platform, called for a five-year moratorium of all mortgages and interest bearing debts, a revision of the monetary system, freedom from taxation, and public ownership of utilities to pay all costs of government.

The revised monetary system suggested would allow issuance of paper money as currency, with silver, coined free, as "coordinated money."

Harvey has been living at his home here the past several years, writing his prescriptions for economy.

to fill, and supervising the building of his pyramid, a structure in which he plans to store for the benefit of posterity the records of this civilization, which he predicts will be destroyed.

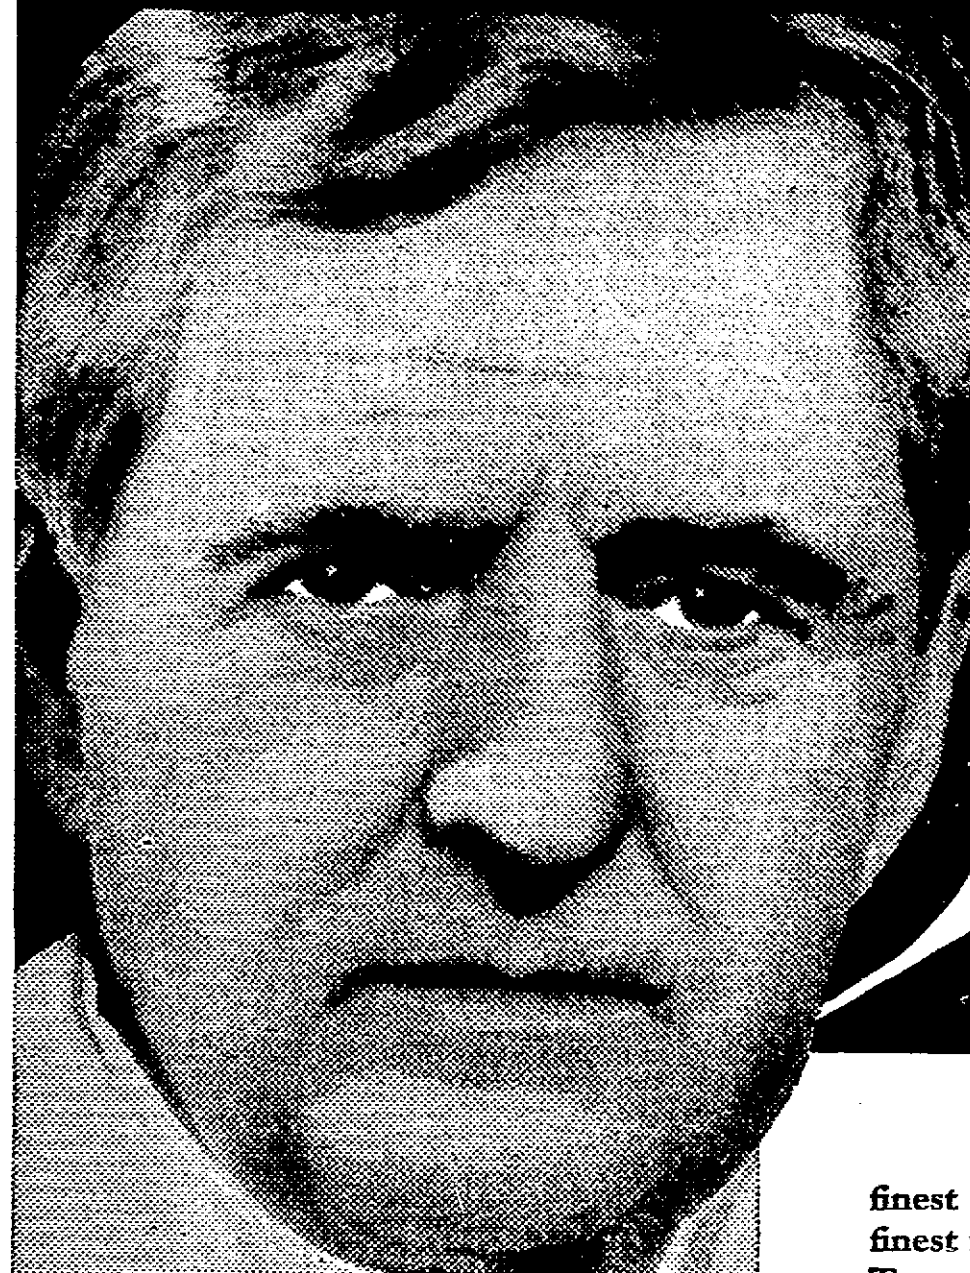

The base of the pyramid, covered by a tent, formed the convention hall.

JAPANESE BUILDING LOOTED BY CHINESE

Hankow, China. (AP)—Foreign dispatches from Ichang today said Chinese mobs recently looted the Japanese Naval hospital and damaged the Japanese Naval club there as a result of intense feeling created by a local committee directing an anti-Japanese boycott.

Similar attacks were reported planned upon Japanese institutions in Hankow, but the present floods prevented their culmination.

The Yangtze river at Hankow maintained a steady level at 53 feet today. Calm, pleasant weather succeeded Tuesday's typhoon, but many foreign buildings were weakened and their owners feared their collapse, with heavy losses.

Practically the entire wall surrounding the Standard Oil company's Hankow installation crumbled today.

GANDHI CONFERS WITH VICEROY WILLINGDON

Simla, India. (AP)—Viceroy Lord Willingdon and Mahatma Gandhi resumed their negotiations today over matters that may delay until Sept 5 Gandhi's departure for London to attend the second round table conference.

Lord Willingdon, following a special meeting of the executive council, is understood to have informed Gandhi that the government could not see its way clear to extend the inquiry into the actions of tax collectors beyond the Barold district.

While the extremist members of Gandhi's cabinet are insisting on such extension as a condition to his participation in the conference, it is believed that he will abide by the viceroy's decision, in which case he may sail Saturday as announced yesterday.

Gandhi telegraphed Miss Madeline Slade, his secretary, in Ahmedabad to take his baggage and personal papers to Bombay, pending settlement of the date of his departure.

Teach Child How He Can Dress Self

BY ANGELO PATRI
"Time to get up, John George."
"Yes mother."
"Hurry up and get dressed. Now remember. If you are not dressed in fifteen minutes I'm going to punish you. Fifteen minutes remember."

"Yes'm."
"Now hurry. Are you beginning?"
"Yes'm."

Five minutes pass. Mother looks into the room. John George is sitting on the edge of the bed in his birthday suit. His underwear is in his hands but not in his conscious mind. A faraway smile rests on his calm countenance of John George.

"What's this? You know what I told you. Get busy young man or I'll be in here with the hairbrush. I mean it. Hurry up. Get into your clothes. Now hurry."

Another few moments pass and mother looks in again. John George has one stocking twisted about his leg and the other hangs limply from his hands. At sight of his mother's wrathful face he looks up at her and says, "Rover has teeth all the way round his mouth and some of them haven't grown up yet. Two of 'em have, but lots of them are teeny."

"Put on your stockings. Are you going to get dressed or am I to come with the hairbrush?"
"I'm dressing. I am hurrying. Can't you see I am most dressed? I am—I am."

"There, I told you that if you were not dressed in fifteen minutes I'd use the brush on you and I meant it. Now dress yourself. Put that stocking on. Now fasten that garter. Stop sniffing or I'll give you something to sniff for."

Every morning I have to have this scene with you. Now go to the bathroom and wash yourself. Mind you hurry. Breakfast is on the table.

What are you going to do with him? Talking is no good. Bribing is no good. The hairbrush is useless. He will need it again tomorrow.

When you have a John George you have to help him over his difficulty. You help with each garment. He slips it on and you smooth it; he puts in a button and you do three. Then the stockings. If you were wise you laid them ready the night before, all set to slip his toes into, turn over and pull. You set the toes right, he pulls, you smooth, he fastens one and you do the other. Until he gathers sufficient push from the well set routine or habit he has to be boosted. It will teach him, it will save you with a lot of wasted energy.

Begin when the child first seems to understand about dressing. Let him help himself as much as possible, while you stand by to help. Lay the child's clothes ready, in order of their use, so he has a good start. Help him until he can go alone. He will when he can. (Copyright, 1931, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

The Draheim aggregation started the ball rolling in the initial frame by pounding in five runs. The Stecker-Schmidt crew returned with a similar barrage and hammered in four runs. ## HOLD EX-FOLLIES GIRL IN NIGHT CLUB BRAWL

New York—(P)—Miss Hilda Ferguson, one time Follies girl, who said "my dear" to a judge, was in jail today as a material witness in a night club brawl. Her escort, William "Tough Willie" McCabe, erstwhile aide to Arnold Rothstein, was stabbed and knocked out with a water pitcher. She was unable to provide $5,000 bail.

Miss Ferguson, once a close friend of Dot King, whose mysterious murder was a sensation, insisted she knew nothing about the fight early yesterday morning in a club on E. Fifty-second-st.

Assistant District Attorney Price, who questioned her for hours, was called "my dear" every time she answered.

"I really don't know anything about it my dear," she told Judge Freschi in court as he ordered her detained.

Stories told by several witnesses indicated that two men came into the club, drank with McCabe and then got into a fight with him.

Miss Ferguson said she knew McCabe three weeks, but thought his name was Mahoney, the name under which he first was registered at a hospital.

Hundreds Attracted To Planetarium In Chicago

Chicago—(P)—At the rate of nearly 2,000 a day, laymen are learning what the solar system is all about with little more mental exertion than is entailed in attending a movie.

The three-day schedule of the million-dollar Max Adler planetarium—the only such edifice in the western hemisphere and the most elaborate one in the world—finds the awesome drama of the heavens consistently playing to crowds that tax its 600-seat capacity.

Sitting in darkness, persons of all ages and degrees of cultural attainment see the firmament started, stopped, speeded up, taken apart, put together again, brightened, dimmed and otherwise juggled by manipulation of buttons and levers.

An odd, dumb-bell shaped instrument, weighing some three tons, costing $75,000 and driven by seven motors, is mounted on a movable steel frame in the center of the chamber. It constitutes the projection room for this astronomical movie. The operator stands at a console-like switchboard at one side.

The instrument, contains 3,000 parts and has 122 lenses, many of which contribute hundreds of "stars" to the celestial panoply.

One end of the "dumb bell" produces the stars in the northern hemisphere, the other those of the southern. A small arrow of light flits about the dome to serve as the lecturer's pointer.

On the linen-lined dome, 68 feet in diameter, can be traced, at a few deft movements of the operator's fingers, the paths of the stars through any given night or day.

MAN KILLED WHEN RIDE DEVICE FAILS

Kalbunde died at a hospital shortly after he and two companions, Fred Smith, 19, Phelps, and Carl Sether, of Northland, were thrown from their seats in an amusement device. Part of the apparatus fell upon them as they lay sprawled on the midway.

Smith was taken to the hospital, suffering from injuries to his legs. Sether was bruised but not seriously injured.

Hoff died of injuries received when the motorcycle he was riding collided with an automobile at a street intersection.

SEE TROUBLE IN ENGLAND HAVING EFFECT IN U. S.

Difficulties Over British Budget Likely to Influence American Policy

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1931 by Cons. Press
Washington—(C.P.A.)—The difficulties of the British government in balancing its budget are very likely to have a profound effect on American fiscal policy.

Officials of the administration who have been urging economy and prudence in expenditure frankly state their belief that no stranger argument could have been adduced to offset the dozens of federal-aid proposals made in the last congress which are bound to be revived in the December session.

The American concept, or rather the administration contention, has been that relief work and charitable effort must be handled as a local community responsibility, that it is the duty of every state and every city to care for its own residents. The theory that the federal government should provide the funds and should tax the nation as a whole to care for the people in distress has been advanced by several Republicans as well as Democrats who together, however, do not constitute a majority and congress at the last session did not permit any of the measures to become law. Indeed, whenever there is an issue of states' rights, party lines are broken down if the matter involves spending money.

Issue Is Drown
Thus in a flood of relief, the states insisted that it was a federal problem. When regulation is sought the states' right question bobs up and there is a cry of usurpation by the federal government of the power of the states.

President Hoover like his predecessor Mr. Coolidge is insistent that state responsibility and obligation is just as important as state assertion of rights or powers. The forthcoming winter probably will afford a real test of the question of federal aid to the unemployed and those in distress. Last winter the controversy over whether the red cross should accept $25,000,000 in federal funds for drought relief led to the refusal by that organization to make the money. And the federal government had no machinery of its own for determining those who should not get relief. The matter was finally placed on a "loan" basis so as to preserve the tradition that the federal government does not donate money to those in need.

The federal government did regard the Mississippi flood as an "emergency" and more of a disaster of the elements than a working of economic laws.

Opposition Strong
It is Great Britain's experience with the dole, however, that has stiffened the opposition here to any federal aid that means a direct appropriation for those without jobs.

For the present the federal government is confining its activities entirely to coordinating local relief agencies. It is making sure that the states and cities are being stimulated to care for themselves. Such coordination may or may not be a far-reaching responsibility but to prevent ultimate dependence on the federal government the work is being undertaken.

Incidentally a successful operation of the Gifford relief organization means an anticipation of possible criticism from congress. To put it another way, if the president's efforts through the Gifford plan do not succeed, the cry for federal aid will be hard to combat. But the "dole" remote from American fall of the British cabinet makes experimentation.

WOULD TRY TO TAKE U. S. OUT OF BUSINESS

Chicago—(C.P.A.)—The Federation of American Business today sought permission from the state of Illinois to incorporate for the purpose of inaugurating a nationwide campaign to "set government out of business and to fight communism."

The federation, Bernard W. Snow, political leader and member of the board of directors, said, would seek dissolution of the federal farm board and 79 other agencies which are "using taxpayers' money to compete with taxpayers' business."

Charles A. Wilson, president of the Chicago Livestock exchange, said the federation included agricultural and labor leaders who see "destruction of American ideals and principles of government through the steady encroachment of government in business as a slow but certain victory for socialism and communism."

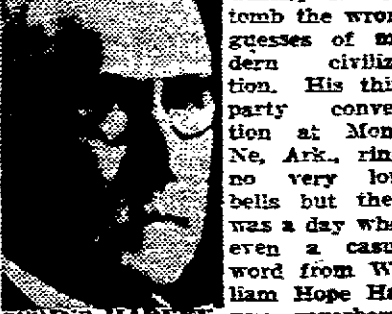

A temporary organization has been functioning for some time, but officials said the application for the charter was withheld until twenty states were represented in the federation.

The board of directors include: James E. Bennett, J. A. O. Press, former governor of Minnesota, William T. Callaway, M. W. Pickett, and Harrison T. Jones, executive secretary of the National Butter, Egg and Poultry association, besides Snow and Wilson.

BY LEMUEL F. PARTON

Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press
New York—(C.P.A.)—"A little more work for the undertaker," sings "Coin" Harvey, building a huge pyramid in which to entomb the wrong guesses of modern civilization. His third party convention at Monte Ne, Ark., rings no very loud bells but there was a day when even a casual visitor from William Hope Harvey's "Coin" Harvey very reverberated through the corn and wheat belts like a messianic thunder.

The spare, energetic, sharp-tongued Harvey put the ponderous and mellifluous William Jennings Bryan on the map. "Coin's financial school" was a smash hit, in the practice league, which advanced the bush recruit, Bryan from first to third and almost sent him home. Historians agree that without Harvey's opus there would have been no "cross of gold" drama and the flopping career which followed.

That was back in 1895, during the hysterical hang-over from the big smash of '93. "Coin's financial school" was in the form of Socratic dialogues between "Professor Coin" and obscure financiers, always to the latter as the professor expounded the doctrine of free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to one.

It raised a big whoop in the farm regions and drew the lines for one of the stubbornest and most critical political battles ever fought in America.

Harvey was born in Buffalo, West Virginia, and is now past eighty. He was educated at Buffalo academy and Marshall college. He practiced law in West Virginia, Cleveland and Chicago, later engaging in promotion enterprises in Colorado and Utah, contributing greatly to the upbuilding of the city of Ogden. He had a shrewd business sense and made money.

With the fade-out of Bryan and free silver, Harvey founded a philosophical colony at Monte Ne, in the Ozark berry belt near Rogers, Ark. For years he has insisted that the modern financial system "carries within it the seeds of its own decay." As no one seemed to heed, he began a year ago the construction of a concrete pyramid, 130 feet high and 60 feet square, in which he is placing, for future archaeologists, the how and why of the downfall of the modern world. Many of his predictions of the present situation, made five or ten years ago, are disquietingly apt.

August Heckscher, 53-Wednesday, has made it a life rule never to waste a word or a nickel, but he sometimes shoves out millions rather casually. When the stock market broke in 1929, he daily sweated 20 words out of a 30-word telegram, reproved his secretary for verbosity and remarked carelessly to a friend that he had just dropped $5,000,000 in the market.

Mr. Heckscher is a rosy, energetic little man who moves along happily through his ninth decade, shipping train loads of Florida oranges to poor children, rallying his associates to a concerted attack on the slums, and, in general, strewing money around where he can see results. One of the most generous of American philanthropists, he places "social service" ahead of art museums and libraries and is alert and ready in relieving distress wherever he finds it.

Apprenticed to a Hamburg importer at 16, he scorns college. He likes Mozart but has no use for modern music. To learn English when he arrived in New York, he memorized pages of Dickens and Smollett. These authors, with detective stories and newspapers, still constitute his colossal fortune was started soon after arriving in America when he engaged in the anthracite coal business with his cousin, in Pennsylvania.

He then moved into zinc, petroleum, tobacco and copper, and, less fortunately, Florida real estate. He plays the stock market as an exciting pastime, and has his own recipe for curing headaches. He beats himself on the head with his knuckles. The Heckscher foundation for children is his greatest philanthropy.

British cabinet gains a staunch opponent of the dole, except as a measure of extreme urgency. Through his entire political career he has been an insistent advocate of fundamental economic measures designed to stimulate trade, and employment, rather than desperate palliatives.

Errand boy, engine cleaner, fireman and locomotive engineer—such was the pre-political career of the shrewd, canny statesman who now holds honorary degrees from Oxford and Cambridge and who is and has been a powerful opponent of the extremists in the British labor movement. He advances vigorously the utmost use of state credit in connection with development and expansion, and has maintained a clear conception of inter-colonial unity and cooperation as the one possible solution of the problems of the empire.

DENY READINGS OF U. S. THERMOMETERS

Claim High Temperatures Resulted from "Steam Heating"

San Bernardino, Calif. — (C.P.)—Charging the United States Weather bureau taking its readings here from a steam heated thermometer, the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce and newspapers today noted an exception to official reports showing a maximum of 105 degrees yesterday and 115 degrees for the preceding day.

Defenders of the local climate protested to Col. H. B. Hersey, government meteorologist in Los Angeles, that the official thermometer was within reach of the steam heated atmosphere of a nearby automobile laundry. They presented reports, allegedly readings from three other tested thermometers in various parts of town, showing a maximum of only 102.

The San Bernardino Sun also disclaimed knowledge of any egg-frying by the sun's rays.

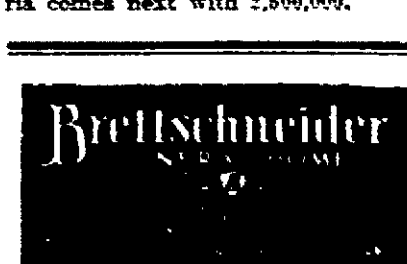

A break in the heat wave started to materialize yesterday, according to the Los Angeles weather bureau, but did not get far. It was 84 at Los Angeles at 3 p. m. Other points in Arizona and southern California reported temperatures of 112 down.

Rip tides claimed another victim as hundreds of persons sought relief at the beach. Lawrence Tarkenton, 20, of Long Beach, lost his life yesterday. He was the second such victim in two days.

PIG KNUCKLES ARE PLENTIFUL IN GERMANY

Berlin—(C.P.)—However blue the outlook for German purses, the prospect brightens for that great section of the population fond of pig knuckles with their sauerkraut.

Pigs in Germany increased in 1930 by nearly 3,000,000 to a total of 23,000,000. The province of Hanover alone has 3,000,000 porkers and Bavaria comes next with 2,500,000.

DR. KERLIN ENDS ADDRESSES AT CAMP MEETING

Christian Endeavor and Sunday School Convention Will Start Thursday

Special to Post-Crescent—Addressing an audience of approximately 300 persons in the tabernacle on the Evangelical camp ground here Wednesday evening, Dr. Edmund Kerlin of Indianapolis, Ind., concluded a speaking engagement at the annual Appleton district camp meeting which has been in progress here since Friday evening. As pastor of East Central church at Indianapolis, Dr. Kerlin has been spending a vacation addressing summer church assemblies in Iowa and Wisconsin, and completed this year's schedule here Wednesday evening.

The Rev. Philip Schneider of Appleton, district presiding elder, has been presiding at the services which have been held forenoon, afternoon, and evening. In addition to the addresses at the district camp meetings have been completing the daily programs with sermons. Special music has been provided largely by choirs from the local congregation, directed by Louis F. Runge. A mass choir of 40 voices known as the Forest Junction Choral union sang Sunday evening, and a two-part chorus of nine ladies' voices from the Morrison congregation sang Tuesday afternoon at a special missionary meeting conducted by Mrs. Hazel Schneider of Lark.

On Thursday afternoon, the meetings resolve themselves into a Christian Endeavor and Sunday school convention. The Rev. J. G. Bleiler of Neenah and the Rev. Peter Ratzlaff of Berlin will engage in a discussion of "Balancing the Program of the Church with Its Placings," after which Miss Florence Schmidt of Appleton will address the assembly. The Rev. J. G. Bleiler, past commander of the post, E. G. Brown and James Graham.

Special to Post-Crescent—New London—The men's club took the lead in the city soft ball league Wednesday evening when they defeated Hamiltons, 5 to 4. The men's club played a steady game. Regular pitcher, had a bad time in the outfield and one of his errors resulted in three runs for the visitors. The losers had a chance to tie the score in the sixth when Edminster tripled, but his homer, landed next to two men with a trouble and the men's club coasted into an undisturbed win.

A meeting will be held to determine if this team will enter the Oshkosh soft ball tournament. The Legion, which was to play Hamiltons, did not have enough men on the field and Hamiltons may claim the game on a forfeit. At present second place is tied between Hamiltons and the Borden-Plymouths.

CULBERTSON on CONTRACT

by Ely Culbertson
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

A SPARKLING DEFENSE
IN CHESS the greatest masters of the game are those who can fathom the endless complexities of that game and see what the future has in store if a certain line of play is decided upon. In Contract, however, the defense is difficult or the play of the Dummy and the closed hand anything more than elementary, the same qualities stamp the player as great, average or mediocre.

The master of the game is the one who can find the trick of actual combat, can find the way to make what appears to be an unmakeable contract. Equally, the master player on defense shows his title to mastery by discovering the only possible plan to defeat what appears to be a sure game.

Contract is much more than a game of Aces and Kings, important as these honors are. If that were all there were to the game then the public would soon learn that it would not present the endless variety which adds spice to games, as it does to life.

In today's hand the question of defense is uppermost. The play of the Declarer is forced. Wooden defense or, in fact, anything but the most expert defense, would result in a game as unprofitable as it was not strange that when this hand went down, the Declarer felt that his troubles were over.

South—Dealer
Both sides vulnerable

Today's Pointer
The Value of the Average Hand in Tricks

In each suit an Ace, a King, a Queen and a Knave, or one fourth of total honors, is the average share of each player before the hands are seen. Such an average hand is worth 1 trick for the Aces, and 1 trick for the King and Queen in different suits.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED
Mr. Culbertson will be glad to analyze hands sent in by readers. Address him in care of this newspaper, enclosing a TWO-CENT STAMPED, SELF-ADDRESSED ENVELOPE.

MINOR MISHAPS BESET PLANES IN AIR DERBY

52 Planes Still Remain in Race from Santa Monica to Cleveland

Amarillo, Tex. —(AP)—Pilots in the National Air derby, beset by a series of minor mishaps on a flight from El Paso, Tex., to Amarillo, faced another lap today with End and Bartlesville, Okla., as the objectives.

Three planes, all piloted by women, made landings at unspecified points yesterday. All, however, eventually reached this city. Three planes blew out tires in landing here. Fifty-two ships remained definitely in the handicap flight from Santa Monica, Calif., to Cleveland.

Ruth Stewart of St. Louis made a forced landing in a field near Roswell, N. M., the luncheon stop, because of motor trouble, but arrived here at 9 p. m.

Mrs. C. E. Shankle of Fort Sill, Okla., forced down by the breaking of a stabilizer, made repairs with barbed wire and continued her flight.

Within sight of the Amarillo airport Mildred Morgan of Beverly Hills, Calif., headed her plane toward Claude, 30 miles southeast of Amarillo, and landed there. She returned here later and was eighth to check in.

Mrs. Blanche Noyes, Cleveland entrant who was delayed in Arizona by motor trouble, arrived at El Paso late yesterday and said she hoped to overtake the other fliers at Bartlesville.

Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, Calif., consistent leader in flying time, flew the 200 miles from Roswell, N. M., to Amarillo, in 1:23:32, an average of more than 175 miles per hour. She was aided by a strong tail wind.

Phoebe Omie of Memphis, who rated second at El Paso in score points, was second to reach Amarillo. She flew from Roswell in 1:21:43.

Jean La Rens of Dallas was third. W. E. Musgrave, Jr. of San Francisco was the first man to cross the marker. His flying time of 1:19:34, however, was beaten by E. B. Christopher of Chicago, who landed less than a minute later, his flying time being 1:18:02.

Mrs. Clemie Granger of Santa Monica, who led the fliers in score points when they left El Paso, was

CHARGE MAN WITH 1ST DEGREE MURDER

Identify Man Arrested in Indianapolis as "Blackie" Faust

Kenosha —(AP)—Accused by authorities of first degree murder in the slaying of Mrs. Anna Patterson, Chicago, allegedly ravished and strangled to death Aug. 20, during a drinking party, Joe Miller, alias Lester (Blackie) Faust, was on his way to the Kenosha-co jail today.

The suspect was arrested in Indianapolis, Ind., by deputy sheriffs on a John Doe warrant and started here yesterday. He was apprehended when a woman from whom he begged food notified police she thought the man answered descriptions of Miller. He waived extradition.

Authorities said Mrs. Alma Ledbetter, 24, and N. B. Nilson, 53, Chicagoans, held as material witnesses in the case, will be asked to identify the prisoners as their companion on the roadhouse tour which culminated in Mrs. Patterson's death.

The body of Mrs. Patterson was found by a fishing party beside a Soo Line grade crossing near the village of Silver Lake. A pathologist reported she was strangled and there was evidence she was attacked.

On information credited by authorities to Mrs. Patterson's husband, an ex-convict, Nilson and Mrs. Ledbetter were arrested the day following discovery of the body, they admitted police said, they accompanied "Blackie" and Mrs. Patterson on the fatal ride.

NATIONAL GRANGE TO GATHER AT MADISON

An outstanding event of agricultural interest and one of the big farm conventions of the year will be the sixty-fifth annual session of the National Grange, to be held in Madison Nov. 11 to 20.

The University of Wisconsin will cooperate with the Madison Association of Commerce in promoting this important national farm meeting, which will be attended by several thousand members of the Grange from 32 states and the Dominion of Canada. This is the first national Grange convention ever held in Wisconsin, and the first to be held in the midwest since the one at Grand Rapids, Mich. in 1919.

The high spot of the session will be the conferring of the seventh degree, highest in Grange ritualism, at the Madison Masonic temple on Nov. 13. It will be given both in the afternoon and evening, and at least 3,000 initiates are expected.

OPEN STATE FAIR AT DAWN SATURDAY FOR SEVEN-DAY RUN

Accomplishments of Wisconsin to Be Outlined for Citizens

State Fair Park, Milwaukee —(AP)—A record of Wisconsin's accomplishments during 1931 will be given to its citizens when the 53rd state fair is thrown open here at dawn Saturday morning for a seven-day run.

Ralph E. Ammon, manager of the fair, today declared that cattle barns, sheep and swine pavilions and exhibition halls are jammed to the doors with products of all kinds.

More than 1,000 head of cattle are entered but this form of livestock and chickens are the only two farm products which are the same in number as last year. Waterfowl and turkey entries show a 50 per cent increase.

Some 11,000 sheep will be on display, an increase of 35 per cent over 1930. The swine show has increased 25 per cent and about 15 per cent more draft horses have been entered.

The entries in the dog and rabbit and fur animal show represent increases of 50 and 40 per cent, respectively, while women's exhibits, county exhibits, fruits, flowers and vegetables, "surpass anything in the previous history of the fair," Mr. Ammon said.

"Entries in every department are astounding," he said. "While all records were broken last season, the 1931 fair has received more entries than ever and practically $2,000,000 worth of farm and factory products will be on display."

An airplane and special automobile show have been added to the exhibits this year.

Featuring the week's entertainment, a circus pageant, "The Badger Awakening," will be staged by a cast of 550 people on a 600-foot stage Saturday night. "The Awakening" will delineate the story of mankind by a combination of singing, ballet dancing and fireworks.

Governor LaFollette will speak before the grand stand Wednesday afternoon, which has been designated as Governor's day. On Sunday afternoon the Wisconsin Federation of

NEW YORK PLANS TO USE RADIO IN CRIME DRIVE

Commissioner Asks $100,000 for Installation of System

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright, 1931, By Cons. Press
Washington—(CPA)—New York city intends to expand its police radio system in its intensified campaign against gang warfare and other crime. Instead of the single police radio station it now boasts, authority to erect three stations to cover the entire metropolitan area will shortly be asked of the federal radio commission if the rulers of the city's budget approve Police Commissioner Mulrooney's request for a radio appropriation of $100,000.

Most interesting of the features of the new radio system Commissioner Mulrooney proposes to install is the speech scrambling device, a relatively recent development now in use on the Transatlantic radio-telephone. It is designed to prevent criminals from tuning to the police wave-lengths—as they have been doing in some cities—and thus following the movements of the minions of law and order.

The official federal log of police radio stations, now listing around 50 in as many cities, reveals the fact that New York city's police department has only one police radio station and that it broadcasts on long waves to the harbor police only.

Unlike so many other cities, New York does not have its squad cars equipped with short wave radio receivers for reception of orders and instructions that will readily dispatch partmen to the scene of a crime. Commissioner Mulrooney's plan involves the erection of three short wave stations that would broadcast to the 250 squad cars of the city's police, to the police launches and to the two police airplanes.

One of the stations would be located in Manhattan, another in Brooklyn and the third in the Bronx. In addition, the commissioner would create a police radio bureau to administer this phase of the effort to strengthen his forces. The entire plan has been laid before engineers of the radio commission here, and the allocation of wave lengths for the service will be a mere matter of routine once the city fathers authorize the appropriation for it.

The way the police radio works is simple. An alarm is telephoned to headquarters, reporting, for example a burglary at a particular place. Over the short waves reserved for police purposes, which cannot be tuned in by the average home receiving set, an order is flashed immediately to the squad car patrolling that particular vicinity. The police, of course, can arrive at the scene of the crime in much shorter order than they possibly could by being phoned or dispatched from headquarters. Organized criminals recently have been wont to use short wave receivers of their own to keep track of the movements of the police, but the speech scrambler to be used by the New York department is looked upon as the solution of that problem.

the pipe a-going between scenes, but within a few minutes he disappeared abruptly in search of fresh air. One of the prop men with strong nicotine capacities was finally assigned the task of keeping the pipe fires burning.

The reason in the first place that they picked out a southern gentleman to play "Aunt Virgie" is because Miss Patterson's home is on the edge of a river and she knows her river rats. In addition to smoking a corncob pipe she had to stand on deck while Lew Ayres threw rocks at the boat and other people fired revolvers at it. She liked the role, too, only she couldn't eat in public. For the past two months, she hasn't had a manicure because "Aunt Virgie" never dreamed of such high-fangled nonsense.

Today, however, with the picture finished, Miss Patterson had her nails trimmed and polished and went to the Embassy for lunch. Without her corncob.

Actress Smokes Corncob Pipe In Film—Gets Sick

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright, 1931, by Cons. Press
Hollywood—(CPA)—It was a simple corncob pipe that pretty nearly disrupted the filming of "Heaven on Earth." The pipe in fact pretty nearly disrupted Elizabeth Patterson and caused such havoc amid the interior of an assistant director that he wanted to change the name of the picture. "Heaven" was the word he particularly wanted to change.

You remember Elizabeth Patterson as the lady-in-waiting in the recent Chevalier film. With the gentleman-in-waiting she enabled the chamberlain to pronounce the royal bedchamber as a royal bedchamber.

Miss Patterson, an actress of long experience on the stage, really is a lady and comes of a distinguished southern family. On the stage she has appeared with Stuart Walker, Billie Burke, Ann Harding, Katherine Cornell, Peggy Wood, and Pauline Lord. In the Chevalier film she was still a lady with a court train, coronet, and whatnot. But suddenly she found herself "Aunt Virgie" in the Lew Ayres picture, and Aunt Virgie was a river rat who lived on a boat and smoked a corncob pipe. Miss Patterson doesn't even smoke a cigarette.

Forced From Set
The pipe made her feel very funny indeed, especially when the boat rocked. An assistant director who smokes consistently offered to keep

Estevan, Sask. —(P)—Several Saskatchewan towns presented battered appearances today because of a 20-minute tornado last night.

One man was killed and two others injured in a construction camp near here by flying timber. Barns and signboards were blown down, several barns unroofed, and a grandstand in a ball park twisted out of shape. A box of freight cars rolled down an incline and smashed through the walls of a roundhouse.

The half mile trestle of the Neptune branch of the Canadian Pacific railway was smashed, chimneys, telegraph poles and trees were knocked down. Tram windows were broken by hail.

The town of Arcola was cut off from other villages when its telephone lines were ripped down. Several of its stores were wrecked.

FAST AND NIMBLE...SMOOTH* AT EVERY SPEED

That Describes Oldsmobile's Performance

In spite of their brevity there are three words which will give you a real idea of what Oldsmobile's performance is like. And those three words just about encompass everything you want in a motor car. * * The first is FAST. If you have ever competed against Oldsmobile's performance on the road, you'll agree that the car well merits this description. If you haven't, all you need to do is to try Oldsmobile on some stretch of road where you can open the throttle wide... and thrill to its smooth, effortless speed. * * The second term which so well fits Oldsmobile's performance is NIMBLE. That means you can drive about town with the utmost ease—sprinting away from other cars at the traffic light, and slipping easily through heavy traffic to go swiftly on your way. * * The third term, and one of the most important, is SMOOTH. Oldsmobile's abundant power is delivered smoothly and quietly throughout the entire speed range—so that the car's brilliant performance abilities are yours to enjoy to the fullest extent. There is never a feeling that you are "pushing" or straining the engine. * * Fast. Nimble. Smooth. Those three words tell the whole story. But to appreciate just how much of a story they tell, you have to get behind the wheel. And when you do drive Oldsmobile, you'll realize that here is the car you've been looking for all this time—the car you want, and the car you can easily own for a most moderate investment.

MOON OF DELIGHT

by Margaret Bell Houston

Chapter 33
A NOTE FROM MOLLY

ALL that she could lose was lost, Juanita reflected. The burden that remained—faintness and foreboding, the black night, terror, love and heart-ache—the river would devour it all. Brown, sluggish waters that never told their secret...

Juanita started opened her eyes. Gabreau, who had often sat beside her bed as she lay ill, had drawn closer to her, was speaking more softly than before.

"I know somep'n else," and as Juanita looked at him, Meester Stanard came to the door—many times he came to the lobby, wipin' of tiles. He ask where you are and dey tell him you and de marquessa have go away. He say "Where?" Dei tell him dey not know, but mebbey you will come back in lit' while. Dey say dey will tell you he call—when you come. He say, "Let me know instead dat she is here." He turn round, and look at me and say in low voice, "Do you know where she is?" Now whe he ask me dat? "I don't know, Gabreau. Perhaps you looked as if you know." Gabreau looked hurt. "I nevair look like dat way."

"What did you say?" she asked. "I shiek my head, and he go away. I am fool, yes, but all day I am sorry I shiek my head."

"Gabreau!" Juanita half rose. "You wouldn't tell him where I am?"

"No. De marquessa here too. I not even tell dat. But I am sorry I shiek my head. He look so worry and he come so mooch... He love you, Juanita? Yes?..." And as Juanita turned her face away to hide the tears, "I know he love you. An' you love him. You cry his name when de fever burn you. You say too you will go police station and give go' self up. You say mooch things, Juanita—but most you cry his name. An' so I know you love him. Dat is mebbe why I am sorry I shiek my head. I wish mebbe he would find you, and tek you 'way."

"He must never find me here."

"Why? Eef you are here he can not find you somewhere else..."

"He would not understand, Gabreau. I know what he believes of women in places like this. I know what he would believe of me."

Gabreau nodded. "I know, Like Fifi. But me, I know when I see you. I not know soch womens like you was in de world." I have only like Fifi. But I know you when I see you."

"Dear Gabreau," she said, and laid her hand on his. "But there are other reasons, too. I must never see him again, and since I have gone out of his life, I'd rather go without his knowing—this."

It had grown dark in the room. Gabreau, with her hand on his, did not stir. His eyes were closed, yet light seemed all about him, a strange and holy flame enfoldings him. Her hand left his, yet still he seemed to feel it there. Always he would feel it there...

He wondered if she still wept. She wept so silently, not like Conchita's weeping. Presently her voice came.

"I'm going down tonight, Gabreau. I'll have to dress."

"You go down?"

"Yes. Molly's note. I'm better now. And I want to see Molly."

When he had gone Juanita rose, getting slowly into the black costume with its spangled veil. Slowly she went down the stairs, wondering what Molly had to tell her. The parlor doors were just opening. There was time to go in and see Molly now. Conchita came out as Juanita knocked on Molly's door. Juanita saw Divitt sitting in the dim room beside Molly's bed. He looked up and, seeing Juanita, made a dismissing gesture, shook his head.

"She too sick now," Conchita whispered. "Tomorrow, mebbe."

Juanita went into the parlor. Not many were there. The crowd was not the same. She and Gabreau were like ghosts revisiting a changed scene. At ten o'clock Conchita appeared in the parlor door, signaled to Juanita.

"Molly. She ask fer you again." Conchita was sobbing as they went through the court. "Many times she have ask fer you. Divitt say no. But now—anything she say."

Divitt stood by the window, his back to the bed. Molly lay white and small on the great pillow. Her eyes were closed. Conchita went to her side.

"Juanita have come, bebbey..."

Conchita's caressing words... A faint movement of Molly's eyelids.

Juanita drew nearer the bed as Conchita beckoned and made room for her at Molly's side.

Juanita bent over the bed. "Molly," she whispered.

Molly's blue eyes opened slowly. Something like a smile vanished from her face. She tried to lift her head. Her lips moved.

Molly lifted a hand, pointed. Conchita and Juanita looked questioningly around the room.

Juanita leaned closer. "What is it, Molly?"

"Such trouble in the great blue eyes. Molly pointed to the old bureau. Juanita glanced about. Conchita touched a drawer. Molly shook her head. Conchita touched the second drawer. The third, Molly smiled. Conchita opened the third drawer. A white silk shawl, embroidered in whiter roses. Conchita took the shawl out, held it up that Molly might see.

But Molly did not see.

Rain falling in the court. Rain all day, all night. Breaking clouds. A filter of sunlight. More rain.

Sometimes the parlor went on. Juanita, yelled and silent, moved about in the changed crowd. The little note from Molly's last message to her—had begged that she return. Molly had wanted to say more but all she had had time to convey was her wish about the shawl. Conchita knew already what Molly wanted with the shawl, having heard her say. But apparently Molly desired that Juanita should know too. Together they had folded it about her as she lay asleep, Molly looking all seraph at the last.

Juanita knew now that she would stay until the end, since Molly had wished it. But the end was not far. There was a new chief of police. Places like Divitt's were being closed daily under his regime. This would not happen to Divitt's unless it happened soon.

The parlor would die of themselves, now that Molly was gone. Divitt's heart was not in them. He had come in but once in the five days since Molly died. If he revived it would be in the form of Divitt's Dive. Divitt would not need her—Juanita—then.

He had said nothing about her going again with the marquessa. Now that he knew she was aware of the role in which he had cast her, he had said no more. Release would come to her in some way before long. Divitt, if she knew him well, would pay her for her services in the parlor. She would go far away, even as Kirk thought already that she had gone.

Rain falling all day, all night. A filter of star light. More rain.

The marquessa sat in her room, listening to its drone on the balcony, its drip from the eaves. Divitt would not let her go down into the parlor. Divitt would not let her go out into the town. She and Juanita were supposed to have left New Orleans "For your own protection," Divitt had said. "With you and Juanita taking French leave of the Standard."

The Tijen had explained that Juanita had been taken ill that night, and that the marquessa had brought her home. Later the marquessa had written a note to Kirk, had written also to Mrs. Belais under Divitt's direction. Juanita, wrote the note, ques, after being suddenly very ill, was able to travel. She—the marquessa—was taking her to a higher altitude. Where this higher altitude might be, the Tijen was not instructed to say, nevertheless, they were gone to it and the marquessa must not appear on the streets.

The marquessa would not ordinarily have submitted to this cloistering. She would have withdrawn to freer air, if not indeed to higher altitudes. There were reasons, however, for her lingering and lingering peaceably.

Will the marquessa's plan work? Perhaps the note the police get tomorrow suggests an answer.

SEEKS VALUE IN PRESENT CRISIS IN WORLD MARKETS

Ambassador Dawes Says Nations Will Benefit from Experiences

Kirkcubright, Scotland—(P)—The world's experience in the recent economic distress will be of great value as a guide for the future and in bringing about needed domestic reforms in the various nations, American Ambassador Charles G. Dawes said in a speech here today.

Speaking at the dedication of a Memorial gymnasium given to Kirkcubright by Thomas Cochran, New York banker, the ambassador said that at the same time the hope of constructive accomplishment in international negotiations is advanced.

Declaring the permanence of important understandings depended upon "substantial mutual interest," Mr. Dawes said "it was not sympathy, but national self interest, which forced international common action in the adoption of the expedients of the past few months."

"Today," he said, "practically all the peoples of the world are living for the first time in the midst of adverse conditions and business depression. It is not a pleasant way to live."

"But irrespective of the fact that we deplore it, we must recognize the important benefits which will accrue from it eventually."

"It is not in times of adversity that mankind makes its mistakes. It makes its most egregious errors and commences its greatest follies in times of prosperity."

"It is only when common hardship is being endured that absolute interdependence, under a natural law, of individuals, of classes of individuals, and of separate peoples is realized in such a way as to influence mass attitudes."

"The present economic distress which most nations are experiencing at this time, may bring about the necessary man everywhere the sense of interdependence, not only of individuals, but of classes of individuals, will tend in all countries to bring about delayed domestic reforms by making them politically practicable."

"In prosperous times the outcries of the radical minority, as vociferous as it is unrepresentative, exercise their maximum influence upon the timid and irresolute in public places."

"But it is different in a time of real crisis, either domestic or international. Then under the laws of human nature the separate peoples are sensing their own national and international interest in terms of their own personal interest and as an inevitable result not only their domestic but their international relationships improve."

The self-interest of every nation, the ambassador said, lies in better international understanding and economic peace.

Grain Notes

Chicago—Not in recent weeks has sentiment in the grain trade been more hopeful of a change for the better than at the close yesterday. Traders said it was more difficult to buy than to sell wheat, the reverse of conditions the past several weeks. All markets are said to have been well liquidated by tired holders.

The short interest, however, is not regarded as heavy and close observers of conditions said that the city for the expected a little setback from the extreme advance of the day and most favored the long side of the market on all breaks.

"Wheat itself is making no new pressure," says the Uhlmann Grain company, "but in the Kansas City, Duluth and Minneapolis show a net increase for the week of only 1,000,000 bushels, indicating that even though the movement is now on in the northwest there is hardly any increase. Australia, which has been a big factor this year, and shipped 154,000,000 bushels during the 12 months ended July, 1931, undoubtedly will have a much smaller average. Stocks of United States wheat in Canada have increased to 32,000,000 bushels, against 4,000,000 bushels last year and of course such items prevent taking too bullish a view of the situation, even though slight changes upward in prices may occur."

Broomhall says the demand in Europe appears insufficient to absorb offers of wheat from Russia and the Danubian countries. Charterings from southern Russian ports is fairly active, including one full cargo to Japan.

The strength in September corn is beginning to be reflected in the new crop months," says Harvey Williams of Thompson and McKinnon. The open interest of over 24,000,000 bushels in December, March and May represents a short interest and not hedges, as there is practically no new corn under contract and probably will not be until the crop is safe from frost.

PRICES ADVANCE ON LIVESTOCK MARKET

Upward Swing Continues in Chicago Cattle — Cattle Run Is Good

Chicago—(P)—Continuing the upward swing that began late yesterday, the hog market today showed a 10-15c advance in the opening trade.

Most popular weights were 190 to 220 lb kinds, which sold first at $5.55-5.75, 10c higher than the highest price paid Wednesday. Butchers scaling 240-250 lbs ranged from $6.25-6.65 and 140 to 170 lb lights from $6.25-6.50. Pigs were slow. Best light packing ones sold at $5.25, and others at $4.15-4.50. Receipts continued normal with 18,000 estimated at Chicago today.

Another run of better grade cattle was on hand and buyers were eager to take all the steers selling from $9.00 up at fully steady prices. Bulk of the run consisted of beef steers to sell at $7.50-9.50 and few replacement cattle on hand to satisfy the wants of nearby fatteners, who have shown increasing interest in $7.00-7.50 feeder and stockers, and to be sent back to the market in the fall. It is believed, however, that there will be a shortage of good feed cattle. Yearling steers and heifers suitable to sell at $3.50 or higher were scarce and in strong demand. Best sellers were held at $10.25 and higher.

Competition for feeding lambs, and for the well finished native and western ewe and wether lambs in the run of 15,000, overcame the depression effect of a lower demand for lamb market yesterday, and early sales were in line with the close of Wednesday. Choice natives were saleable at $8.00 or better. Packers had a year ago.

Arrivals for the week thus far stand at 47,481 cattle, 92,737 hogs and 76,048 sheep, against 49,919 cattle, 82,325 hogs and 87,389 sheep at the same time last week, and 42,021 cattle, 90,419 hogs, and 101,547 sheep for the corresponding period a year ago.

BUYING POWER WEAK; WHEAT PRICES SLUMP

Easier Undertone Is Apparent on Chicago Grain Market—Trade Dull

BY GILES L. FINDLEY Associated Press Market Writer

Chicago—(P)—Wheat prices had a downward trend today because of scattered selling by overnight longs which found buying power weak. Aggressive buying, so much in evidence yesterday, was lacking and an easier undertone was apparent. Buying against bids checked declines.

Bulls were disappointed because of Liverpool weakness. Russian shipments were heavy and European weather improving generally, despite floods in Germany and Belgium. Corn was swayed by wheat action. Oats showed relatively more strength than corn. Provisions were firmer with hogs. Receipts: Wheat 79,000; corn 54,000; oats 64,000.

Weather reports from Europe were generally more favorable, except in southwestern Germany, Belgium and parts of France where floods have done considerable damage. As a result of severe storms and heavy downpours in France, wheat offered for sale in the field and large quantities are lying in the field and on the thresh. The Russian exports of wheat are heavy, shipment from Black Sea ports this week totaling 6,604,000 bushels as compared with 4,616,000 last week and 2,352,000 a year ago.

Needed rains have fallen in the Argentine and the new wheat crop is said to be germinating satisfactorily. There has been active buying of United States hard winters and Canadian wheat in France lately. Corn traders said little heed to bullish news from Iowa and other northwestern states where the drought has damaged the crop and corn swung downwards because of scattered selling. Oats were steady. Provisions firmed with hogs.

PRICE TRENDS SHAKY ON N. Y. CURB MART

Strong Oil Group Turns Reactionary Under Apparent Profit Taking

New York—(P)—Price trends wobbled uncertainly in another apathetic session of the curb market today.

The recently strong oil group turned somewhat reactionary, apparently under profit taking. Standard of Kentucky and Humble lost about a point, and Standard of Indiana sagged a few fractions. American Gas and Electric pushed up more than a point, but this advance was considerably reduced later. Commonwealth Edison, a high priced issue, which trades in odd lots, usually fluctuating one to three points between sales, sold nearly two points lower. Middle West Utilities eased a little in active trading. Electric Bond and Share held about steady, as did Cities Service.

Pan American Airways pushed up nearly a point in the early trading. Aluminum Co. did not trade until toward midday, but then appeared a little higher. Deere appreciated fractionally. Philip Morris common was traded in some volume, but failed to make important headway. The stock, however, pushed up to a 2 1/2 point high in a few transactions.

The Pipe Line issues, which are thinly traded, moved divergently. Eureka advanced more than a point in a turnover of a few shares, recording a new high for the year, while Cumberland, somewhat more active, turned heavy.

Investment trusts moved narrowly in the main. United Founders was turned over in some volume. Prudential Investors Preferred sold a couple of points higher.

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU "VIRGO"

If August 28th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 a. m. to 11:45 a. m., from 2:15 p. m. to 4:30 p. m., and from 9 p. m. to 11:15 p. m. The danger hours are from noon to 2 p. m., and from 6:30 p. m. to 8:45 p. m.

The astrological aspects an August 28th are most active and favorable point to a day of success and happiness. One may look forward to a great deal of material gain in commercial and speculative undertakings, and it is a most opportune time for launching new schemes. Harmony and congeniality will exist in the home circle; many happy and lasting marriages are predicted.

A child born on this August 28th will possess a most active and fanciful imagination, but will be inclined to exaggerate things to an alarming degree. This habit should be checked early in life, for it might cause serious trouble in later years. It will have a highly impressionable and artistic temperament, but its emotional and mental faculties will be fairly well-balanced.

If born on August 28th, you have a very vivid and magnetic personality, with an amazing attraction for the opposite sex. Your likes and dislikes are very strong, and you take no pains in concealing them. Your nature is entirely frank and surprisingly tactless. You would do well to be a trifle slower in your judgment of other people, as too often your heart rules your head. People who do not come up to your standard of culture or intelligence are of no interest to you, and you discern them as quickly as you can, revealing a rather selfish nature.

You are rather erratic in your actions and are forever changing your mode of existence. This restlessness will lead you to travel extensively, and your horoscope indicates a life of extreme activity and curious adventure. You should accomplish much, for you possess an unlimited supply of energy and vitality, and pursue, in a dogmatic spirit, any enterprise in which you are interested. Your untiring efforts are usually crowned with success, and you will in later years make for yourself a very desirable position in life.

You are a very great student.

5 FOREIGN AIRMEN TO FLY IN RACES

Pilots Will Not Enter Competition at Cleveland, However

Cleveland, O.—(P)—Major Ernst Udet, German war ace, was scheduled to land at municipal airport here today, completing the contingent of five foreign airmen to come here for the national air races starting Saturday.

Major Udet will fly from New York, where he went yesterday from Washington and a reception by President Hoover.

The four other fliers, arriving here by train from Warren, where they were forced down by a storm, are Flight Lieutenant R. L. R. Atcherley of the British Royal Air force; Lieut. Col. Mario De Bernardi of Italy; Captain Boleslaw Orinski of Poland, and Maj. Alois Krbita of Czechoslovakia.

The fliers were treated to a thrill when Pilot John W. Gable, flying their department of commerce trimotor plane, landed in a hay field near Warren after a fruitless search through the rain and storm for the airport.

Two other planes carrying Lieut. Alford J. Williams, Mrs. Williams and L. W. Greve, president of the National Air Races, Inc., landed with them. Lieut. Williams remained over night at Warren.

The pilots will fly at the air races but will not enter competition.
